Class spirit shines through while seniors Josh Tobey and Lori Carey participate in hippie day during homecoming week.

"I enjoy playing sports outside of school. It gives me something to do and keeps me from being bored after school. I also like to stay active and in shape," said sophomore Jenny Dickey.

"Outside of school I really enjoy Friday night football," said football player junior Damon Stansberry.

People

The first few busy and hectic months of school provided plenty of opportunities for students to get involved, start academics, and get re-acquainted with friends. Soon after getting settled into the new school year, students were bombarded with the normal school activities such as class spirit competitions, fall sports, dances, pep sessions, fund raisers, and working toward the first nine-weeks report cards. In the midst of the readjustment to school life from summer break, students gained meaningful memories of friends and school experiences that will last a lifetime.

In addition to the new and exciting events of returning to school, came familiar traditions including homecoming, field trips, and school picture day. Also, the yearbook staff returned to the more traditional style for the yearbook, by opting to not use a theme as done in the more recent yearbooks.

Outside of school local traditions continued. To Madison-Grant students, the weekend of festivities during James Dean days was a very familiar event. Although the rebel actor died long before the time of these students, the festival is an important tradition that will continue in our small community for generations to come.

Noontime Activities

The Top Ten Restaurants

1. Burger King
2. Taco Bell
3. Fazolis
4. Applebee's
5. Pizza Hut
6. Chi Chi's
7. Arby's
8. Texas Roadhouse
9. Steak n' Shake
10. Red Lobster

"Steak n' Shake is definitely my favorite restaurant because I love their cookies n' cream shakes," said senior Kelly Hiatt.

"I like Taco Bell because it is not greasy and gross like other fast food restaurants," said junior Mandy Wilson.

In the spirit of Halloween, lunch lady Laveda Brown celebrates her way by scaring the students into buying the school lunches.

Staring intently at the computer screen, sophomore Jeremy Pfeffer keeps himself occupied by exploring the frontiers of the internet during his free time at the library.

Ah, relaxation. When does a student have time to relax? We certainly can't relax at school. But wait! Can't we relax at noontime? We can go to the gym, the library, or stay in the cafeteria.

"I would rather go to the gym," said junior Amanda Taylor. "I go to the gym with a bunch of my friends and play volleyball. You can do more in the gym than you can in the cafeteria."

"I would rather go to the gym," said senior Dan Tate. "When I go to the gym, I play basketball with Brian Hasty, Aaron Vektor, Justin Wallace, Cory Zirkle, and Josh Justus."

Some students would rather stay in the cafeteria at noontime.

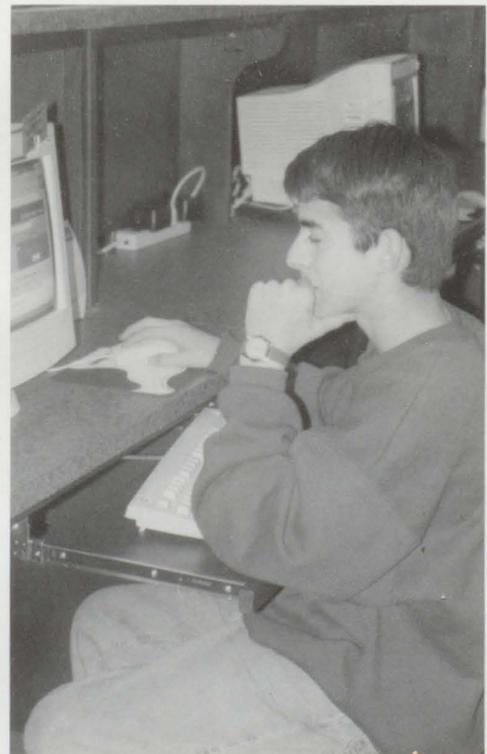

"During lunch I stay in the cafeteria," said junior Heather Bohlander. "I don't go to the gym because my friends don't. I stay in the cafeteria and talk to Dan Tate, Mitch Pelly, Amy Bess, Shana Wheadon, Beth Stephenson, and Cari Everett."

There are also students who go to the library.

"I go to the library usually to use the Internet," said senior Jennifer Wright. "I return E-mails to my friends, do research on the computers, or finish homework."

Most students find school stressful and not at all relaxing, but at least at noontime we can be with our friends, do what we want to do, and relax.

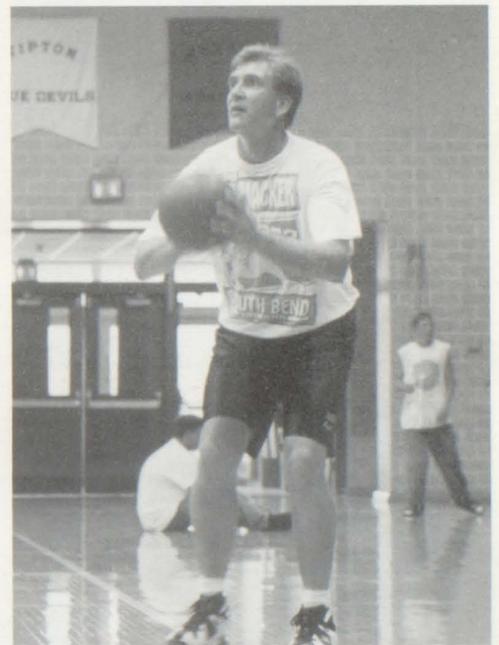

By Mary Jo Draper

Sitting at her usual table, junior Julie Valdez enjoys her salad and chocolate milk along with the company of her friends during "A" lunch in the cafeteria at noontime.

Industrial Tech. teacher, Mr. Summers goes for the winning shot in the teachers vs. students basketball game played everyday in the gym.

Lounging around in the library, reading a magazine, senior Tim Ahrens decides to spend his extra time expanding the horizons of his reading skills.

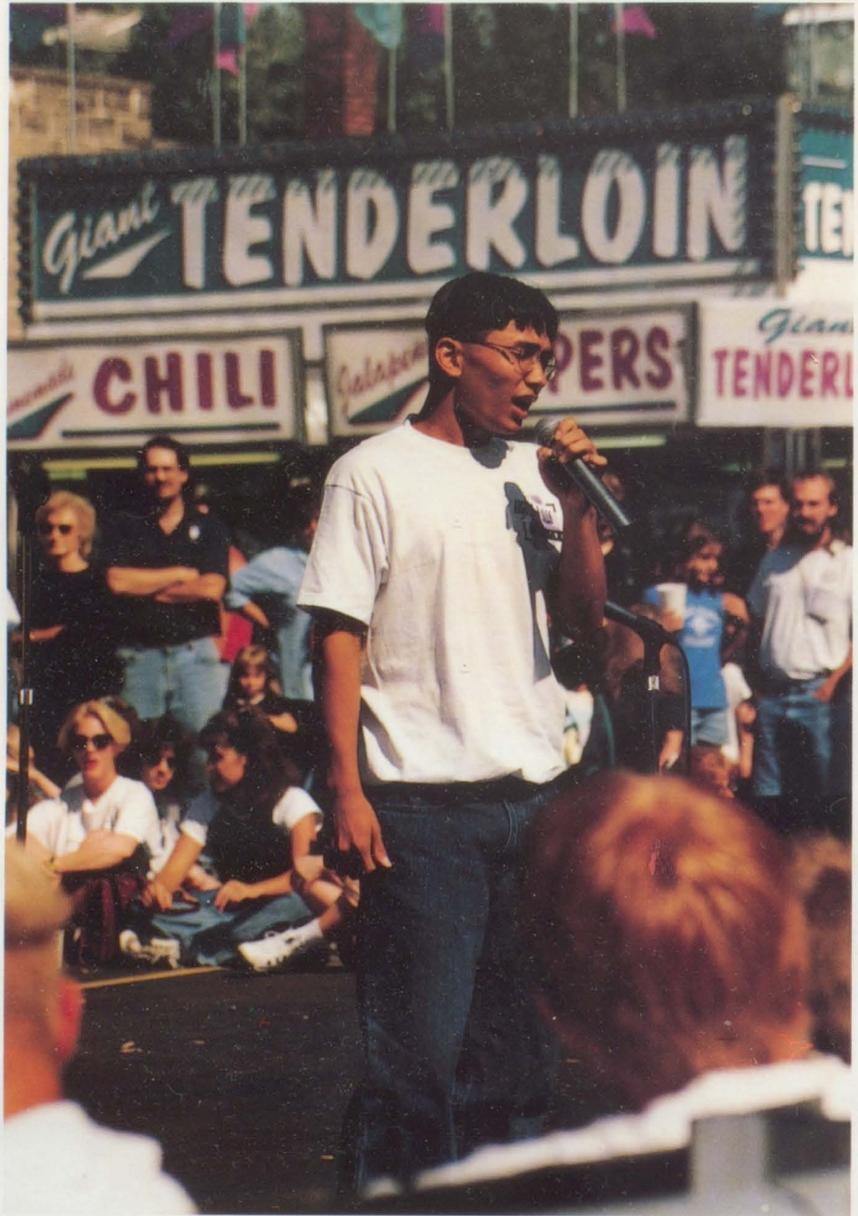

What are these two boys up to? Freshmen Jason Knipp and Zach Holloway laugh mischievously at something that only the two of them know about.

Freshman Katie Miller doesn't seem to mind sitting by her lonesome. She's too wrapped up in the book she is reading. Katie, like some other students, spends some of her noontime in the library.

Senior Yuki Ito sings during James Dean Days, with the ArGuys n' Gals. The performance that Yuki gave was well received by the crowd.

Seniors Tracie Ott and Janine Lashure cheer along with the rest of the senior class during the homecoming pep session. The pep session is a good time for students to show their school spirit.

Sophomore Jimmy Roberts studies during his Spanish I class for the upcoming assignment. Spanish I students spend the majority of the year learning the basics of the language.

Faces in the Crowd

From intellectual to creative, sarcastic to talkative, self-reliant to bold. These were just a few qualities that made students unique. What makes a person unique? "A person's personality, his face, and the way he carries himself, make a person unique," agreed seniors Maia Dickerson and Josh Tobey.

Uniqueness is often displayed in the way a person presents himself, such as through his outfit. Though a creative dresser usually explains that his outfit does not make him unique, but something else makes him unique. One such creative person was senior Aaron Eden, who wracked his brain to think of what made him unique. "My fingerprints," Aaron sarcastically remarked.

Sometimes a person's uniqueness is not always a good trait. Oftentimes some uniqueness can cause a problem for a person. "My ability to stick my foot in my mouth at the wrong time," is what makes talkative senior Laura Linn a unique person.

There were many students who felt that their self-reliance made them unique. Many students said they were self-reliant because they have grown up learning to take responsibility for their actions, think for themselves, are liberated, and live up to their own standards, not anyone else's. "I am not afraid to stand up for what I believe in," boldly stated senior Collette Yingling.

Some students believed their appearance made them different from anyone else, and others thought it was something inside them that made them unique.

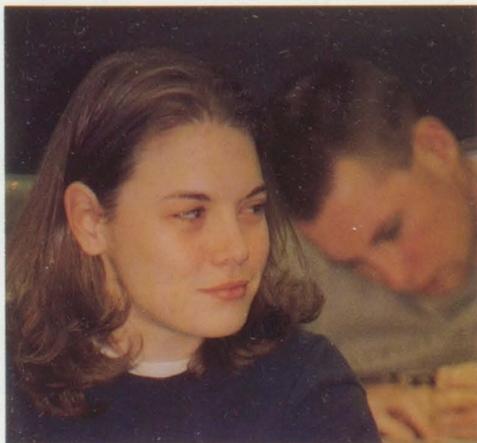

"I think I'm unique because my eyelashes are long and my birthday is on Halloween," said sophomore Kristin Keaton.

"I'm unique because I have a big ugly scar on my knee, and it has two big holes on the side," said junior Amber Bailey.

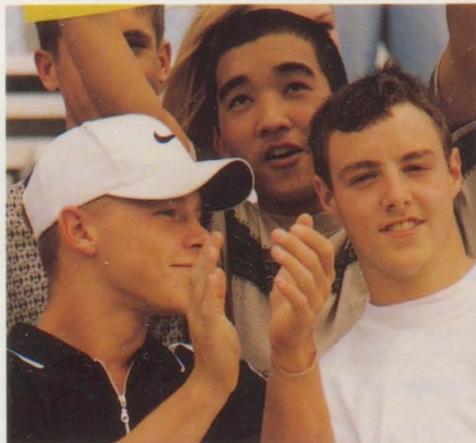

"I'm unique just because I'm myself," said sophomore Casey Blanton.

Students showed that they were unique in many ways. Rather it be good or bad, being unique, not just another face in the crowd, is a quality that many people have.

By Megan Diskey and Amanda Osborn

The Top Ten Movies

1. Scream
2. Liar Liar
3. Men in Black
4. Romeo and Juliet
5. Jerry McGuire
6. Independence Day
7. Dazed and Confused
8. The Craft
9. King Pin
10. Pink Floyd's The Wall

"I like The Wall because I like Pink Floyd's music, and it's cool to watch," said senior Travis Haynes.

"I like Scream because it freaks you out even after you have watched it," said sophomore Bridget Jones.

Homecoming

The fans began to arrive two hours early. The scent of popcorn and nachos filled the air as music played over the intercom. There was a suspense of what was about to happen. It was all a part of an annual event--the homecoming game.

Kickoff was at 7:30 by the Elwood Panthers, and was accompanied by the first crack of thunder and streak of lightning from an approaching storm. The first foul of the game was against the Panthers within the first three and a half minutes of play time. With a minute-forty left on the clock, senior Eric Sites made a touchdown for the Argylls' first score. Senior Josh Tobey then made an additional point with the field goal, making the score 7-0 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter, the Panthers tied the score 7-7. The Argylls took a 14-7 lead when senior Dallas Coleman made a touchdown and Josh Tobey made the field goal. At the end of the second quarter the score was 17-7, the last three points made by a field goal from Tobey.

During half-time, the King and Queen for the senior class were announced. The King, Aaron Eden, led the Queen, Cara Hussey into a convertible to drive away just as the rain arrived. Because of the dangerous lightning, ear-piercing thunder, and driving rain, the game was delayed for thirty-five minutes.

The game soon resumed, and with three seconds left in the third quarter, Eric Sites made a touchdown, making the score 23-7. With Tobey's field goal, the score jumped up to a 24-7 lead on the Argylls part for the end of the thirdquarter.

Elwood's Kevin Powell started off the fourth with a touchdown, missing the field goal. With the Argylls strong offensive plays, Eric Sites made his third touchdown of the evening, and with the field goal by Tobey, the score leaped to 31-21 on MG's behalf. Although Elwood's Greg Cauble made a touchdown, it was canceled by a foul, thus ending the game in a victory for the Argylls.

CD's

1. Matchbox 20
2. Sugar Ray
3. Marilyn Manson
4. Puff Daddy
5. 2 PAC
6. Korn
7. Sublime
8. Metallica
9. Wallflowers
10. Pink Floyd

"I voted for Puff Daddy because Janine Lashure told me to, and I couldn't think of anything to put," said senior Tracie Ott.

"I like Metallica because it reminds me of my brother, and I just like listening to them," said senior Leanne Fatkin.

Senior running back Eric Sites eludes Elwood tacklers and breaks through the line during the homecoming football game, against the Elwood Panthers. Madison-Grant won 31-21.

Senior Max Miller and junior Jeremy Freel go through pregame warm ups before the homecoming game against the Elwood Panthers. The Argyls had their way with the Panthers the entire night.

Senior Clark Purvis shows off his school spirit during the hallway competition as a cashier for American Bandstand during homecoming week. The seniors prevailed with another homecoming victory.

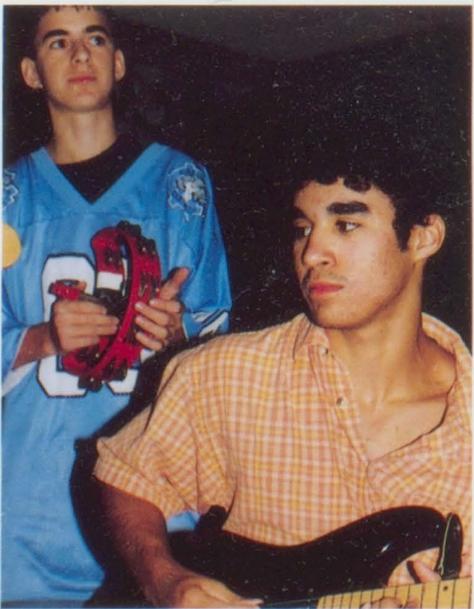

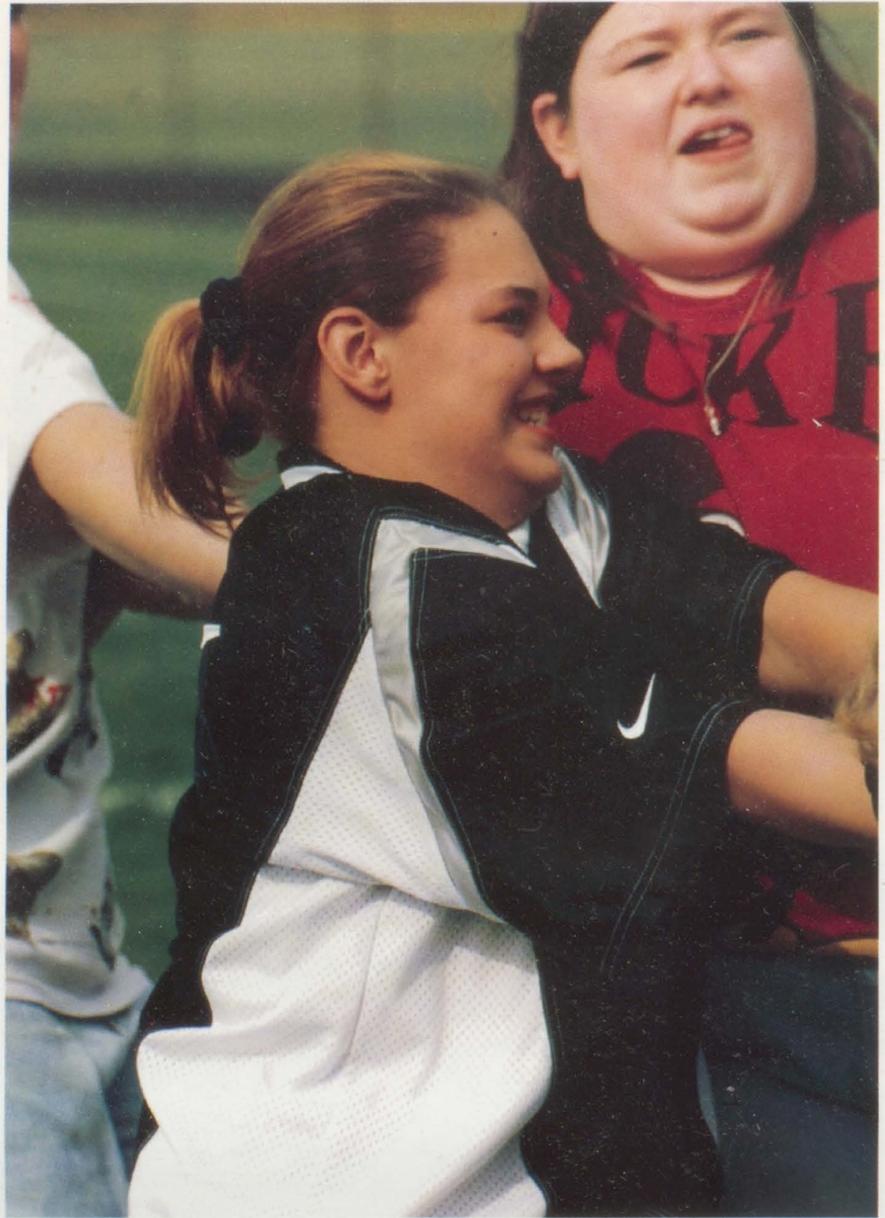

Senior cheerleader Stephanie Maurer shows her school spirit at the annual homecoming pep rally. The cheerleaders play a big role in getting the crowd ready for the homecoming game.

Sophomores Jonny Estrella, playing the guitar, and Jeremy Pfeffer, playing the tambourine, play some tunes while the judges walk through the halls.

Hallway Hysteria

Ed Devebic's, Steak n'Shake, Planet Hollywood, and American Bandstand Cafe--not places M-G students can easily pay a call to during their usual school day. But, the school cafeteria wasn't the only eatery students could feast their eyes on during homecoming week. The hallways at Madison-Grant High School were magically transformed!

"Everybody did a good job," said sophomores Amanda Fisher and Jennifer St. John, "School spirit showed through!"

Live musicians, roller skating waitresses, and rude, food-throwing customers were some of the imaginative ideas brought to life in our hallways.

"Overall," said sophomore Mark Branch, "the hallways were creative." But, junior Beth Stephenson said, "Too much hard work, considering we had no chance of winning." However, her prediction was wrong, because the junior's took first place in the hallway competition.

Each hallway had its own group of students vigorously working to meet the deadline and hoping to catch the eyes of the judges.

"It's neat the way everybody comes together!", said sophomore Eric Deines.

Hard work to havoc. Excitement to exhaustion. This was all part of the hysteria felt in the hallways during homecoming week!

Dress Up Days

Dress up days brought out the school spirit in many students.

Along with their color, each class also had an item to wear. Freshmen wore socks on their heads. Sophomores wore sunglasses. Juniors wore hats, and seniors wore bandannas.

"I painted my body blue because I'm full of school spirit," said senior Shaun Nelson.

Tuesday was hat day--everything from baseball caps to sombreros.

"Hat day is special because we don't usually get to wear hats to school," said junior Amanda Taylor.

Wednesday was hippie day. Bell bottoms and peasant shirts once again ruled the halls.

"I found my clothes for hippie day in my mom's closet," said junior Beth Stephenson.

Thursday was hex'em day. Red, white, and blue (Elwood's colors) were worn by many.

Friday was black, gold, and white day. Many students enjoyed wearing the traditional M-G colors.

The Top Ten TV Shows

1. Home Improvement
2. Seinfeld
3. ER
4. 7th Heaven
5. Friends
6. Simpsons
7. Party of Five
8. Drew Carey
9. Saturday Night Live
10. Mad About You

"Friends is funny. The characters get caught in funny and realistic situations," said junior Mitch Pelly.

"7th Heaven is a good family show. With all the bad stuff on TV, this show has good family morals," said junior Caitlin Whitmore.

Foreign Exchange Students

The United States is a very unique place. It is splashed with all the many different colors of the world, such as many diverse languages and different ethnic styles. However, no matter how diverse the U.S. has become, it could never compare with the homelands of the six foreign exchange students. Just how does the United States compare though?

"We begin our school day at 7:30 a.m., and we go for eight periods that end at 4:30 p.m.," commented Korean foreign exchange student Hae-Joung Jung. "We don't change our classrooms; our teachers come to us."

Not only is time and order a difference, but size is also. Madison-Grant is very small in size compared to German foreign exchange student Dorothea Mueller's school. "My school has 1,200 students, and we don't have the same schedule every day," she explained.

Many students find the disciplinary system in the U.S. rather harsh, and Swedish foreign exchange student Magnus Nilsson would have to agree. "The schools in Sweden don't put discipline as important as the American schools here, nor do they have as much homework," he said,

However, aside from school, there are many other differences in the U.S. according to Argentinan foreign exchange student Florencia Calcante. "I like that you can drive when you are 16. You have to be 18 in my country," she commented.

Swiss foreign exchange student Richard Blindenbacher said that in Switzerland, though, he has more independence. "Family life and school seem to be more important here," commented Richard. "Teenagers have more independence in Switzerland.

Given the chance to live in the U.S., each foreign exchange student would jump at that chance. Finnish foreign exchange student Markie Launonen said, "Sure I would live in the U.S.! I miss this place already!"

The Top Ten Stores

1. Spencer Gifts
2. Gadzooks
3. Buckle
4. Gap
5. County Seat
6. Wal-Mart
7. J. C. Penney
8. The Closet
9. Spiece
10. Finish Line

"The Buckle has really great clothes for guys and girls. I like everything from jeans and sweaters to shoes and hats," said sophomore Lindsey Martin.

"Gadzooks is up to date with fashion, and also they have some crazy stuff to choose from," said junior Jennifer Wilson.

Taking a break from her busy school day, senior Marjo Launonen from Finland relaxes in the hall.

Senior Kyle Davis expresses himself through clothes, jewelry, and a painted face during homecoming week. Davis always finds a way to express himself as an individual.

Howdy Partner! Individuality is easily expressed if one has enough nerve to wear this pretty pink hat, like junior Damon Stansberry with his friend, junior Kent Jarrett.

Personalizing

While walking down the halls, one may notice the many different ways that students personalize their belongings to make them more unique and eye-catching.

"I think that just by putting your name on your bag or notebook makes it more unique to you," commented senior Jamie Callahan.

From patches to keychains, and even fingernail polish, students use a variety of materials to personalize their bags.

"I like to put patches on my bag, and some of my friends sign their names on it too," said sophomore Nicole Skinner.

Some students wanted something really original to personalize their bags.

"I wanted something no one else had, so I painted my own pictures on it with fingernail polish," said sophomore Kristin Keaton.

"I put keychains and pins on my book bag," said junior Erica Steinmetz.

Students not only like to personalize their bags, but they also like to personalize other things, such as lockers.

"I like to decorate things with items that make me happy or that make me laugh, also with things that have to do with Jesus," said junior Ambi Noland. "I like decorating with pictures of foreign countries. I put magnets and stickers of all sorts in my locker. I have one I got from a blood drive.

"I put stickers in my locker to make it more interesting," said sophomore Stephanie Sullivan.

Stickers aren't the only things that students use to decorate their lockers.

"I put pictures of my friends in my locker," commented junior Amber Bailey. Students also use things to personalize their agendas.

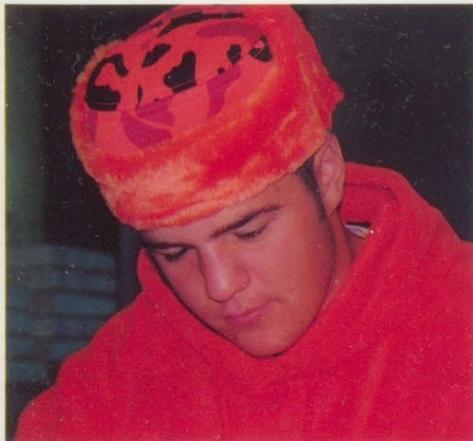

"I like to draw on my agenda," said sophomore Charlene Mockobee.

Some students put just one certain thing on all of their belongings.

"I put my 'A' symbol on just about everything I have," said senior Adrian Rhettts.

Whether students use the popular patches or something more original, most of them personalize their belongings to make a long day at school just a little more interesting.

By Jonni Parks

From Pooh to hearts to hot air balloons, junior Caitlin Whitmore enjoys decorating her premier school agenda with colorful stickers.

The Top Ten Brand Names

1. Nike
2. Adidas
3. Calvin Klein
4. Levi
5. JNCO
6. Boss
7. Tommy Hilfiger
8. Fila
9. Reebok
10. Converse

"Nike is comfortable. The shoes and clothes fit good," said sophomore Clint Jump.

"I like Levi jeans and shirts because I like the way they look, have good variety, and are comfortable," said sophomore Eric Gozales.

TRADITIONS

There are many different traditions at M-G. Some are more popular than others like homecoming, Mr. Bach dressing up as Santa Claus, and the Christmas auction. Then there are those traditions that one may not realize which include the canned food drive, red ribbon week, blood drive, art club Christmas paintings, seniors and parents luncheon, Arguys and Gals participating in James Dean Days, and Peer Tutor Disability Day.

Many had a favorite tradition here at school, but one of the top favorites was the Christmas auction. "I like the Christmas auction. I think it's very educational in showing how economics work and handling money, and it also helps people," said business teacher Mr. Holloway.

Senior Ryan Williams agreed, "The Christmas auction is a lot of fun and helps needy people. I like going out with friends to get the items for the auction, and the skit the teachers put on is always funny."

Study hall teacher Mrs. Gisbach simply added, "It brings out the best of us."

Homecoming was another favorite tradition. Sophomore Kylie Croaff said, "Homecoming is a lot of fun. It gets everyone pumped up for the big game."

Senior Brooke Justus' favorite tradition was the blood drive, "I think it's good that they come out here and let us give blood. It's a great way for us to help save lives, and it's something we can continue doing in the future."

Some people say a change is always good, but teacher Mr. Palmer disagrees. He stated, "Traditions bring people closer together."

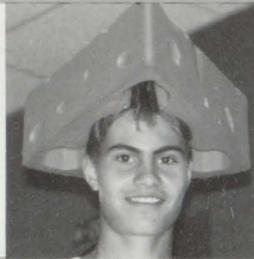

By Jenny Dickey

Personal Views: Some traditions should be kept; others should be done away with.

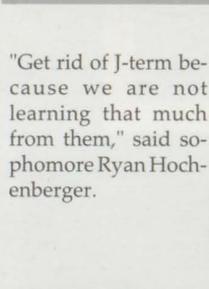

"A revival of a 'Pep Club,' one which knows the cheers and is ready to support the athletic teams with school spirit," said teacher Mrs. Clevenger.

"We should do away with not doing anything before the basketball Grant 4 and sectional. We should have a pep session, like we do for homecoming," said freshmen Brock Meyers.

"I feel we should get rid of having the prom at the Radison Hotel. The dance floor is too small, and it is too far of a drive so late at night. Not to mention we are unable to decorate the way we would like," said junior Beth Stephenson.

"Get rid of J-term because we are not learning that much from them," said sophomore Ryan Hochengerger.

"My least favorite tradition is Red Ribbon Week, because we really don't do much, you pick up a ribbon, wear it for a week, and that's it," said secretary Mrs. Ratliff.

Bidding on students for a night out for pizza is a tradition during the Christmas Auction. $455 was the highest bid ever for a date. Seniors Keith Williams and Jeremy Shelton were the two lucky guys that were purchased for the record sum.

The last weekend every year in September are celebrated in honor of James Dean, a native of Fairmount. Seniors Jill Williams and Amanda Cash enjoy the tradition of walking the streets and enjoying the festivities.

Santa (Mr. Bach) and Dolly Parton (Mrs. Mercer) love a little holiday singing. Mr. Bach has been Madison-Grant's very own Santa throughout his 39 year teaching career.

The NHS has to participate in some type of fund raiser every year in order to raise money for needy families. Senior Josh Tobey used his popularity and great selling ability to his advantage by getting some underclassmen to buy his candy.

Janine Lashure

"I think prayer should be allowed. I know a lot of people who agree with me because it's what our school needs--God's support and the support of other Christians in the school."

--Janine Lashure

Dallas Coleman

"I think religion is a good thing, but I don't think it should be forced on anyone. Prayer in school would be okay for people who want to. No one should be made to pray."

--Dallas Coleman

Rachel Rich

"I think it's a good thing, but people should have the choice to if they want to. A real prayer comes from the heart--you couldn't force someone to pray."

--Marjo Launonen

Jeremy Street

"I think it is okay if someone wants to pray by themselves, but I am against schools forcing prayer on kids. If kids want prayer as part of their schooling, they can go to a Christian school."

--Shaun Nelson

"I think if people want to pray they should be able to pray when they want in a public school."

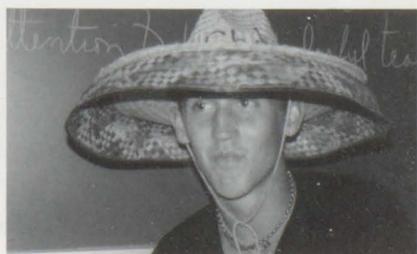

--Troy Robinson

"I think if people have religion, they should be allowed to practice it freely. It doesn't matter if people pray in school as long as they don't force others to pray."

--Rachel Rich

"I think prayer in school is okay--I think it would be great for the school."

While sitting in the office, senior Kerry Clark takes a break from her reading for a good laugh.

What is your favorite memory from school?

Michele Crawl

"In Arguys and Gals we tour all of the elementary schools and nursing homes. In the middle of the day we ate lunch in Gas City. A lot of the members went into K-Mart and purchased water guns. We all got in a water gun fight on the bus. We all had wet spots on our clothes. Mrs. Sharkey was not happy with us."

--Michele Crawl

Jennifer Wright

"I have many memories of high school, but I think I will always remember going to Mrs. Herring's room. Even during periods when I wasn't in her class, anyone was always welcome in her room. She would help me with other assignments, offer advice, let me use her computer to catch up on e-mail, or just let us joke around. I don't think I'll ever forget that part of high school."

--Jennifer Wright

Ryan Williams

"I don't think that I could pick out a single memory from my high school years. However, I have a few memories that seem to protrude in my mind. In general, these memories include Homecoming and the Christmas auction. I believe that these times of the year are the most memorable and fun. The whole school is involved and this results in the making of many memories. From soliciting items for the auction to decorating hallways, my favorite memories have been made."

--Ryan Williams

Shaun Nelson

"One of my favorite memories would be the time I tried to shave my head bald, with a straight razor. It was during my sophomore year. I had wanted to shave my head for wrestling. Each day I would come to school with more and more of my hair cut off. I had cuts all over my head along with a little patch of hair over my head."

--Shaun Nelson

Anxiously awaiting the judges' decision outside of senior hall, senior Beau Engle thinks of the big game against the Elwood Panthers.

Senior Amy Record works hard to keep up her good grades as she studies an assignment for her Trigonometry class.

Looking rough and tough, the senior girls' powder puff team members pose with their coaches during homecoming week. The girls took the game by storm.

What career would you like to have someday and why?

Aaron Eden

"I want something in psychology, because I like to know how and why people think certain things."

--Amanda Foster

"I'd like to be a rock 'n roll star, and if that doesn't work out, I'll be an architect. I just love music, and it would be a great way to express myself."

--Aaron Eden

Stephanie Maurer

"I want to own my own business in photography or maybe a dress shop. I want to be my own boss."

--Stephanie Maurer

"I want to be a computer programming and application technician, because I've always been fascinated with computers."

--Doug Harris

Doug Harris

"I want to be an accountant. The main reason is because I'm good with mathematics, and I like money. It's a good job where there's lots of opportunities to advance."

--Brent Dow

"A computer engineer because it pays good, and attracts the girls."

--Clark Purvis

Clark Purvis

"I want to be an elementary teacher because I love to work with kids."

--Misty Hanlon

"I want to own a bar because I like the party atmosphere."

--Cori Morgan

Trying hard to pull off a senior win, senior Kyle Davis participates in the tug-o-war at the homecoming pep session.

During her assistant hour in the office, senior Jennifer Tyra uses her time wisely by working on schoolwork.

Displaying the next item up for bid at the Christmas auction, senior Lori Carey looks into the crowd to see the lucky winner.

Senior Kelly Hiatt concentrates very hard on working with her reeds while weaving a basket in art class.

Concentrating on every note of the school song, senior Neal Yeater plays the saxophone for the band during the homecoming pep session.

If You Could Make Up Your Own Rule for Public Display of Affection, What Would It Be?

Jason Hiatt: "Kissing should be allowed because there is nothing wrong with it. People do it all of the time."

Mary Jo Draper: "I think you should be able to hold hands and hug, or even have your arm around someone. As it is, you can hardly touch without a punishment. Kissing is okay, too, as long as it doesn't get out of control."

Amber Bailey: "I would say save the mushy stuff for when you're alone. Cause when you are alone, then what are ya going to do."

Mark Earnest: "I think affection should be shown in anyway that a person wants to show it, but different affection should be shown at different times."

Craig Havens: "It would be okay as long as you are not taking clothes off. Kissing, hugging, and even touching would be acceptable, but that is as far I would make it go."

What Is The Most Embarrassing Thing That Has Ever Happened To You On A Date ?

Reid Druck: " One time at a volleyball game my girlfriend caught me staring at another girl from another school."

Kyle Feller: " Me and my date went to the mall and when I shut off my cool "vette" it let out a loud backfire. It embarrassed me because my car isn't that great and I didn't need it to do that."

Ambi Noland: " I went to the movies with a guy who laughed at everything even if it was not funny! It was embarrassing!"

Wendy Stephenson: "I was eating at Applebee's when my date said something really funny (I was eating chicken fingers). My mouth was full and I couldn't stop laughing and I thought I was going to choke, but I prevented that by spitting food all over the table. Luckily my date still asked me out again."

Hilary Snyder: "I look up to my dad and stepmom because they got my brother, sister, and I out of a really abusive home. That really means a lot to my brother, sister, and me."

Andy Dow: "I look up to my sister because she helps me out on a lot of things."

Katy Anderson: "I look up to Kurt Cobain because he changed many people's lives and he alone created a new generation. His music began the grunge/punk craze. He had problems just like everyone else, and I pity him for people intruding in his life."

Sianna Wilson: "I look up to my brother Cory because I want to be like him."

Seth Mahoney: "I look up to my friend James Martin because he's cool."

Jacqueline Nance: "I look up to my mom because she's always tried to inspire me in ways, and she's always tried to teach me the right things and been a great parent."

Ryan Nelson: "I look up to my Aunt Dana because she's pretty cool."

Nathan Deal: "I look up to my dad because he's the only person I can talk about cars with."

Creaming Maurice

A senior, whom I had had as an academic junior English student the year before, knew how to tease and embarrass me all by one action. Every time he saw me in the hallway, he would kneel to the floor no matter who else—numerous students, teachers, complete strangers visiting the school—were in the area. He always managed to make my face turn red with embarrassment, and no amount of respondent teasing on my part could dissuade him from this. Over the months, I became so anxious at meeting him in the halls that I was reluctant to even leave my room.

At the annual Christmas auction, I got my revenge. "Maurice" was one of those students who had volunteered to receive a pie in the face from the highest bidder. As the bidding commenced, a twinkle came to my eye, a smirk on my face, and an inspiration to my mind. I entered the bidding for an opportunity to "cream Maurice". Evidently a few others in the audience also wanted this pleasure because the bidding was fierce. As the dollar amount rose and my spare change dwindled, other teachers began giving me money to insure my success. Eventually, the contest formed between myself and one senior girl who likewise was as determined as I to get even with Maurice. At this point, the student body rallied to my cause by collecting among themselves piles of cash and sending representatives to me with handfuls of bills—even checks! (I was touched.) Emotions ran hot, nerves were strained, excitement stung the air. When the auctioneer stopped to wipe his brow, the other principal characters and I stood in the middle of the gym floor, surrounded by the students, teachers, parents, custodians, etc., and I was clutching over $300—only 10 of which was my own. I suggested during this lull in the action that the other bidder and I pool our money (since it was all going to charity), share one big pie, and together cream Maurice. The plan worked wonderfully, and Maurice took his creaming like the good sport he was. My little smirk had turned into many loud guffaws.

I enjoyed myself so much and laughed so hard throughout that I gave myself a tension headache that started at the base of my neck and went clear to my eyeballs. I had to take three Excedrines and go lie down, but the creaming was worth the pain.

By Mrs. Melody Hull

When explaining her funniest moment in teaching, English teacher Mrs. Hull gave such a thorough explanation that she earned this spotlight in the yearbook.

What was your funniest moment in teaching?

Mr. Holloway: "I wouldn't say this was really funny, but one of my students sneezed as I was coming to help him. I looked down at his desk, and there was an incredible amount of snot there. I would say it could have filled up to a four or five ounce cup."

Mrs. Dosh: "Once a boy put a condom in the tissue box. During my discussion I went to get a tissue and out plopped the condom. It fell on the floor. It was incredible that I reached down, picked it up and threw it away, and continued with my discussion."

Mr. Zgunda: "We were having football practice one day. After hearing a bunch of yelling the whole football team looked up and saw the cross country team running by with half of them mooning us."

Mrs. Gallo: "The only thing that comes to mind is once when I was passing out papers in keyboarding, I slipped and fell to the floor. Only a few students saw me as I quickly popped up and continued on! The ones who saw me looked at me and asked 'What are you doing?'"

Principal, R. L. Martin: "One time this mother was calling her daughter in sick. She explained how bad she was and how she was taking her daughter to the hospital. After about two minutes of this, I said, 'I have your perfectly fine daughter in my office.'"

Mrs. Herring: "One year when I was confidently teaching Huck Finn, I loudly transposed the first two letters around in the title character's name."

Mrs. Dunlap: "Too many years ago, I had a student in Geometry class named Tony Oren. We had finished a chapter and after the test, I announced that the next day we would begin constructions. The next day Tony wore a hard hat to class. I asked why he had a hat on. He said it was because we were beginning constructions."

Mrs. Sharkey: "A girl during class was getting ready to warm up. A mouse fell from one of the speakers. All of the girls jumped on their chairs screaming and yelling. Sumer Lewis picked up the mouse by the tail and flushed it down the toilet."

What are your favorite three ways to relieve stress?

Mr. Earnest: "I like to go out and shoot. I think of pleasant things. I like to count to at least 100."

Mrs. Hull: "I leave, take Excedrine, or eat chocolate to relieve stress."

Mrs. Melson: "I listen to tea time music. I go antique shopping. I guess I turn off the lights."

Mrs. Giselbach: "I lunch with teachers. I go home away from everybody. I walk off the frustration."

Mr. Morgan: "I listen to talk radio. I watch the weather channel. I get real cynical."

Mr. Bach: "I like to change my activities. I play golf when I'm stressed. I like to be with my friends."

Mr. Palmer: "I walk. I play computer games. I ride a motorcycle."

Mrs. Dosh: "I like to walk. I like talking to my friends and colleagues. I do something completely different from what's causing the stress."

Mrs. Haviland: "I like walking in nature, the woods, the beach, etc. I like a good movie, a fireplace, and a Pepsi."

Mrs. McConnell: "I like singing. I like working on art projects. I like taking a hot bath."

Mr. T. Martin: "I fish, read, and sleep to relieve stress."

Mr. Miller: "I like playing basketball and physical activities. I like to work around the house. I like to play golf."

Mr. R. L. Martin: "I go to the movies to forget what I'm stressed about. I read magazines, newspapers, and books. During the summer, I work in the yard doing landscaping, tree trimming, and mowing my yard."

Mrs. Ratliff: "I like to shop to relieve stress. I like to walk about two miles every morning to wake me up."

Mrs. Kirby: "I like taking a hot shower for half an hour. I like walking. I like reading a novel for enjoyment."

Mr. Badger: "I like to exercise and run. I like watching sporting events. I like being on the computer."

Mrs. Herring: "I like to exercise by walking with other teachers after school. I like to read books. I like to eat food."

Mrs. Phipps: "I like reading science fiction. I like shopping. I like watching old movies."

Mr. Holloway: "I like to exercise, and I like doing an activity."

Seniors Cara Hussey and Laura Linn demonstrate their language skills along with the importance of academics while having some fun working together during Mrs. Herring's Academic English class.

"Those who ignore history are destined to repeat it." Keeping this old saying in mind, sophomore Elizabeth Vandiver works on an assignment during Ancient World History class.

Academics

In a world of new, constantly changing technology, academics are no exception. The availability and use of technology to students is the main difference of education from the past. Technology has not only changed students' education, but has improved it.

Information is the main source of learning and academics. In the past, most information came from books and teachers. Now however, in this new technologically-based world, information is everywhere. Students today can access almost any source of information electronically. By use of the Internet on the computers provided for students in the library and in most classrooms, students can search for and find helpful information, homepages, tips, or pictures that can help with any subject area in school.

In addition to computers and electronic sources of information, additional multimedia sources are being introduced into the classroom in order to enrich the students' learning experiences.

New televisions and VCRs are present in most of the classrooms, which provide teachers with new and useful tools that can be used to keep up with current events, stimulate interest in a topic, or re-inforce a unit being taught in the classroom..

With technological benefits such as these, students today have a much broader based education, more opportunities than student in the past, and access to worldwide helpful, educational information. The tools that have been introduced to students have the capabilities of offering students today educational opportunities that have never before in history been available.

By Jennifer Wright

Freshman Kory Gipson ponders over his Geometry assignment during study time as he deciphers a difficult proof in Mr. Palmer's class in an effort to learn the difficult process of solving proofs.

Math teacher Mrs. Dunlap goes over a problem from a lesson on special triangles in an effort to help her Trigonometry students understand the assignment.

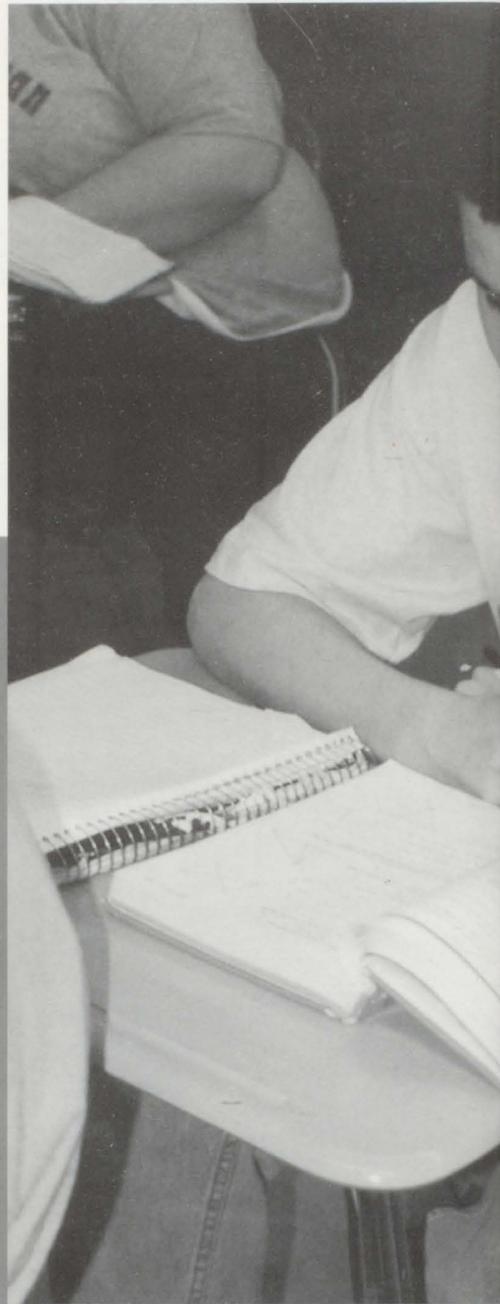

Juniors Katie Runyan and Brock Ricks sit and discuss weekend plans written in Katie's agenda during some free time in Mr. Zgunda's fifth period Genetics class.

Junior Mitch Pelly flips to the back of his book to check on an answer for a difficult problem in Trigonometry class. Trigonometry is a valuable class for any student that plans to attend college.

Freshmen Abbey Carey and Jill Dykhoff listen intently and take notes in their sixth period Algebra class as Mrs. Kirby talks about that day's assignments.

Math and Science

Why is math a difficult area for students to master?

Craig Holloway, junior: "Math is hard at this school because they try to teach us things we will never need in life."

Dallas Coleman, senior: "I don't really think it is that hard. I just think that it is pointless."

Bridget Jones, sophomore: "Because teachers don't bother to take time to teach you right."

Jeremy Freel, junior: "Most math teachers assume that we know things, and we don't actually know what they're talking about."

If you had the ability to clone someone or something, what or whom would it be, and why?

Travis Harrington, junior: "I'd clone myself because I've gotta have two of me to help humanity."

T. J. Fech, junior: "I want to clone a bald eagle because they are endangered."

Cari Everett, junior: "I want to clone more Christians so the world would be better."

Amy Bess, junior: "I want to clone Josh Johnson because he's my boy friend."

Stephanie Vektor, sophomore: "I would clone Brad Pitt just to look at him."

Misty Timbs, junior: "I want to clone a car because they will be cheaper."

Casey Clevenger, junior: "I would clone money because I never seem to have enough. No matter how much money I save, I always seem to need more."

Damon Stansberry, junior: "I'd clone me so I wouldn't have to go to school."

Seniors Sabra Carr and Lori Carey wait as science teacher Mr. Martin identifies an organism under their microscope in Microbiology class.

English and Speech

What is your favorite piece of literature you have read and why?

Brett Hamilton, senior: "Moby Dick, I liked it because of the adventure."

Sean Pogue, sophomore: "Don Quixote is my favorite piece of literature, because it has to do with an eccentric person with a mission. I can relate to that."

Kevin Cline, sophomore: "A Tale of Two Cities, I enjoyed the action and the history told with such enthusiasm through Dickens' words."

What was the hardest part about getting up in front of class to deliver a speech?

Dustin Williams, freshman: "I really don't think that speaking in front of a class is all that hard; just go up there and say what you've got to say."

Dane Gibson, freshman: "I think the hardest part about getting in front of class is that everyone is looking at you, and you forget what you are supposed to say."

Teresa Cisney, freshman: "The hardest part of giving the speech is when you first walk up there, because you are paranoid what the class is going to think. But as time goes, giving a speech is much easier."

Elizabeth Vandiver, sophomore: "I think the hardest part about taking a freshman speech class is that you are already trying to "impress" everybody, and it makes the pressure that much more knowing that you may say the wrong thing."

Megan Diskey, senior: "I think the hardest part is when the students get puzzled looks on their faces like: 'What are you talking about?'"

Frustrated by her stubborn computer, English teacher Mrs. Hull stands back, and with much emotion puts a hex on her technological enemy.

A group of boys in Mrs. Hull's seventh period English class show their best side while playing a game that consists of looking out the window at cars.

Senior Kyle Davis tries a new method of absorbing the material inside his books by sleeping on them in the hallway outside of Mrs. Herring's sixth period senior English class.

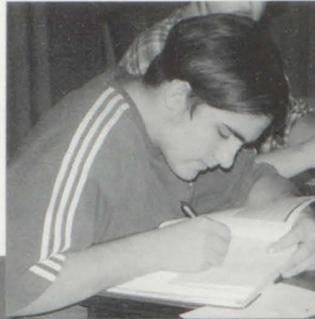

As in all of Mrs. Herring's English classes, she has her students write themes over many different topics. As seen here, Mrs. Herring assists junior Andrea Dodd with creating a catchy first paragraph, during third period junior English class.

During Mrs. Hull's English class, junior Kent Jarrett reads the story "Let the Hurricane Roar," one of the many stories read in American literature throughout the semester.

Sophomore Eric A. Gonzales listens to Mr. Morgan's geography lesson intently. Like a very good student, Eric has his geography book open to the chapter Mr. Morgan is discussing.

Junior David Simonsson proves that lunch can double as a study hall as he catches up on U.S. History homework while friends play cards during "A" lunch.

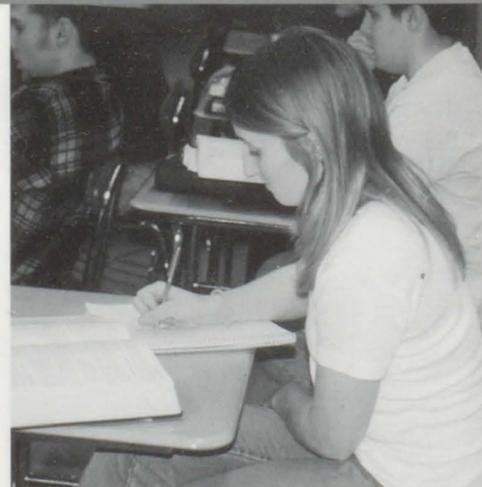

Senior Jason Floyd listens attentively to Mr. Morgan's explanation of the answer Jason just provided for the class. World Geography is important for Jason's future to help him with locations of the world.

Principal R.L. Martin takes time out of his busy and stressful schedule to assist juniors Michael Hiatt and Corey Gosnell with their history. Principal Martin points out some important facts from the book for the boys to take home and study.

Social Studies

If you could be any historical figure, who would it be and why?

Tiffany Allen, sophomore: "I would be Ghandi because he was always determined to get his point across."

Amanda Callahan, sophomore: "I would be John Lennon because he was very peaceful and really liked helping others."

Desiree Justus, sophomore: "I would be Princess Diana because she always did everything she could to help anybody and everybody."

Dustin Scott, sophomore: "I would be Albert Einstein so I could be really smart."

Morgan Rhetts, sophomore: "I would be queen Cleopatra of Egypt because she was one of the best known rulers of Egypt."

Adam Alexander, junior: "I would be George Washington because if I was George, everybody would see my face everyday."

Aaron Aschendorf, senior: "I would be Einstein because I would be the smartest guy ever."

David Cunningham, junior: "I would be King Solomon because he was rich."

Caitlin Whitmore, junior: "I would be Joan of Arc because she was willing to die for what she believed for."

Brooke Jones, sophomore: "I would be Jackie Kennedy because she brought class to the the White House and always had something good to say about everyone."

Senior Rachel Rich tries to listen well as Mr. Morgan gives one of his lessons. Like a good student, Rachel pays attention and is taking good notes.

Foreign Languages

Which phrase do you remember most from French class and why?

Amanda Taylor, junior: "Pas de devoirs!" (No homework!--because I don't like homework.)

Micah Gates, sophomore: "Puis-je prendre de l'eau?" (Can I get a drink of water?--because I hear it every day.)

Alaina Threet, junior: "Ferme la bouche!" (Close your mouth!--because that is what Madame tells me almost every day.)

Brady Barnes, junior: "Ce ne vas pas la tete." (You're out of your mind--because Madame says that to me.)

Shaun Nelson, senior: "Je ne sais pas." (I don't know--because it's the answer to everything.)

Jennifer Wright, senior: "Pas de Giendre!" (No whining--because it's a good philosophy.)

Justin Crist, freshman: "Mais-oui!" (But of course--because when Madame says it, it is funny.)

Jacqueline Nance, freshman: "J'ai mal" (I don't feel good--because everyone always asks how you are.)

Which phrase do you remember most from Spanish class and why?

Tracie Ott, senior: "Yo quiero Taco Bell." (I want Taco Bell.)

Abbey Carey, freshman: "Como se dice?" (How do you say it?)

Kendra Barnett, sophomore: "Cual es la respuesta?" (What is the answer?)

Yuki Ito, senior: "No hablo ingles." (Do not speak in English.)

Richard Blindenbacher, senior: "Que es eso en espanol?" (What is that in Spanish?)

Steven Ott, sophomore: "Como se dice?" (How do you say it?)

Dancing with his favorite stuffed amigo in a Spanish III class skit, junior Mitch Pelly has a fun time while trying to receive a good grade.

Hard at work and having fun in a Spanish III drama, junior Cari Everett chooses a unique way of expressing herself for her group with a mustache, a sombrero, and plaid shirt.

Reading her French book with an interested look, freshman Aftan Pierce is learning and listening in her French I class.

Sock puppets prove to be fun and entertaining for juniors Caitlin Whitmore, Shannon Kesterson, and T.J. Fech during a Spanish III dramatization.

Surprised and disgusted by the Mexican spaghetti served by the mother of Julie Valdez, juniors Chris Woodcox and Julie Valdez take a look at the food that they are about to eat. This was the last day before the Valdez's moved to Texas.

While nervously playing with her hair, junior Alaina Threet uses her last few minutes to read and study before attempting to take one of Madame Phipps' quizzes in French III.

During Mrs. McIntosh's BCA class, senior Rodney Idlewine works on creating his table on Microsoft Publisher 1997. Developing tables is one of the many big assignments required for the class.

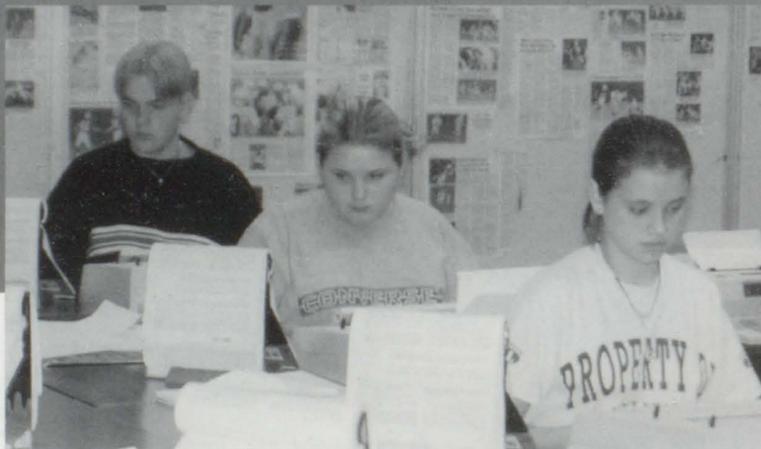

Senior Amanda Foster keeps an eye on her computer screen in her Business Computer Literacy class. The students strive in order to get a good grade and work towards perfection.

While making copies for her teacher, senior Janine Lashure experiments with the new copy machine. The office received a new machine due to the problems with the old copy machines.

Freshmen Hilary Snyder, Misty Dyer, and Dustin Hartley are busily typing in Keyboarding class. This class takes a lot of patience, because there are no computer screens to check your work.

Business teacher Mrs. McIntosh instructs Deanna Dow on how to use her computer. Many students just learning to use a computer have quite a bit of trouble.

Business

Why do you think it is important for students to have a firm education in business today?

Carol McIntosh, business teacher: "Business courses provide students with knowledge and training to become productive citizens in all walks of life."

Kelly Cox, senior: "Computers are used in every occupational field, so a knowledge of what computers can do is essential for a successful career."

Abigail Matchette, senior: "Business is all around us today. Everthing we do in our lives, business is involved. To work and live successfully we need to understand business and computers better. This will make life and jobs much easier."

Natalie Jones, senior: "Classes like BCA and BCL help students learn how to use a computer. In today's society everything is becoming computerized and without this knowledge it is going to be very difficult to get a job."

Maia Dickerson, senior: "Computers control business, without knowledge of computers you can't do anything."

Collette Yingling, senior: "I think it's important for students to be knowledgeable about computers, because the whole business world is going to be computerized in the future."

David Rainey, senior: "Because the world we live in is totally business oriented, and with the way computers are taking over everthing, we need to know as much about them as possible."

Josh Tobey, senior: "Computers are the way of the future. I believe that most everything will be run by computers in the future, and without a sound and knowledgeable background with computers, people will be lost."

Kevin Cline, sophomore: "Especially with computers, a firm grasp on business responsibilities can help one in formatting work and enhancing neatness. Experience in business education also looks good on a resume."

Freshman Andrea Webb is trying not to be distracted while in Keyboarding I class. She is among the many students taking business courses at the high school.

Art and Music

What is your favorite piece of artwork you have created, and why is it your favorite?

Jared Payne, sophomore: "My favorite is a sketch I did of a girl who is really depressed."

Heather Thomas, sophomore: "Mine would have to be the painting I did of a forest reflecting onto a river."

Autumn Gingerick, freshman: "I like the trenio clay beads we made. You could make pictures in the beads."

Johnny Estrella, sophomore: "I made this relief sculpture out of cardboard. It had a little guy in it. I think it's neat."

Tim Ahrens, senior: "Even though I didn't completely finish, my favorite is the purple dragon I made in stained glass."

If you could be any instrument what would it be and why?

Mary Jo Draper, junior: "A piano, because it can be really shy and quiet or really loud and bold."

Joanna Dykhoff, senior: "The clarinet, because I have played it for so long, it's part of me anyway."

Arthur Jenny, freshman: "A drum because they are very bold and loud."

Katy Anderson, freshman: "A guitar, because I would be able to play jazz, heavy metal, or really quiet, soft and sad."

Nathan Deal, freshman: "The drums...just because they are cool."

Beth Stephenson, junior: "I would be a piccolo because it stands out from the others."

Jill Williams, senior: "I would be a piccolo so that I could be heard above everybody else."

Freshman Seth Mahoney plays the school song with the 7th period band in E Hallway. The 7th period band class decided to hold their own pep session.

Attempting to uphold his reputation for being quite an artist, senior Adrian Rhetts concentrates on a tough assignment for his third period Academic Design Class.

Jazz band member junior Mary Jo Draper strains to play the right notes of her trombone during the "Hey" song at a Madison-Grant varsity basketball game.

By the look on her face, sophomore April Vickery is having no trouble using her compass to create a perfect circle in her Academic Design class. The third period class created folders using only compasses.

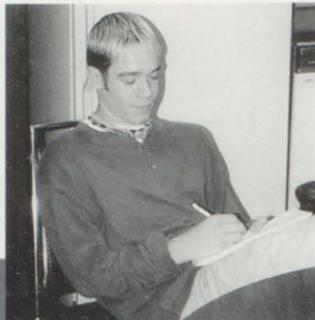

Freshman Brad Wimmer can play the baritone so well, he can even play in his sleep while lying on the ground. Wimmer lies on the football field and demonstrates his skill during the homecoming pep session.

Circle art proves to be a challenge in junior Gwyn Musick's second period basic art class. Skill, patience, and precision are all required elements for a good project in basic art.

Though senior Ryan Martlage doesn't look much like Betty Crocker, all of his Foods II classmates know that he sure can whip up some really mean mashed potatoes.

Laid back in his seat, sophomore Jason Neal pays very close attention to what is being explained to him as he scratches down a few quick notes in Mrs. Clevenger's Foods class.

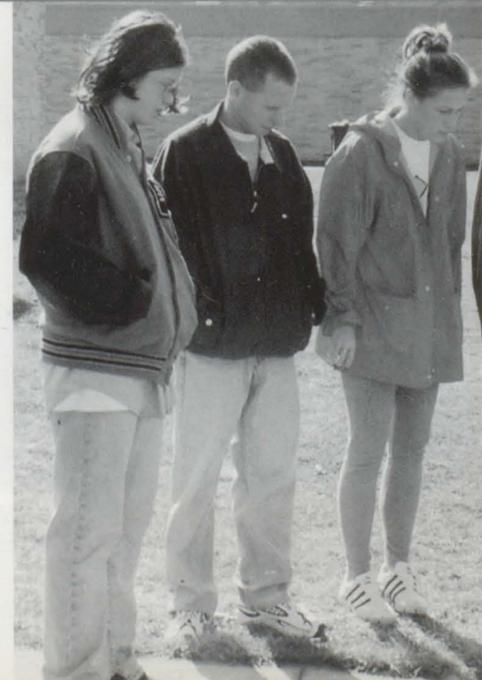

Sitting in woods class, freshman Josh Paschall looks at his newly cut work of art and studies it to make sure it has been cut to his perfection.

Concentrating deeply on her difficult work, freshman Tara Morrison cuts away at a block of wood, held by a clamp, as she begins perfecting her project which requires her full and complete attention while she works diligently in Mr. Bridwell's Woods I class.

Standing outside, seniors Jodi Staggs, Troy Robinson, and Kelly Hiatt study the cement as teacher Mr. Bridwell explains the importance of a foundation for a house to his Tech II class.

Home Economics / Industrial Arts

What is your favorite project you've worked on and why?

Kevin Frazier, senior: "We made a hammer out of metal and wood. It was a lot of fun."

Lee Ross, sophomore: "A movie film reel, it was a real challenge for me."

Scott Martin, junior: "My favorite was the only one I did! It was an all wood hatchet."

Aaron Eden, senior: "I designed a house. It was my favorite because I like architecture a lot and it's what I want to major in in college."

Brad Metzger, senior: "Building a stool, because it was fun."

Brian Hasty, senior: "A footstool, because it was challenging and a lot of fun."

Chris Cole, junior: "So far, taking pictures, because it's better than having to do an assignment."

What is your favorite activity in foods?

Amanda Osborn, junior: "I like to cook so that way I'll know how to do it for the future plus, it fills me up until lunch."

Travis Harris, sophomore: "I like to learn how to cook so that I can survive in the real world."

Kyle Feller, junior: "Free day Friday, where we cook whatever we want."

Reid Druck, junior: "I like eating all the yummy, delicious food."

Megan Wilson, junior: "Foods class was always fun, because you get to eat. Then you're not as hungry for lunch."

Brad Manning, junior: "The food! I love eating in there."

Senior Amanda Dunlap checks to see if the cheese she is attempting to melt is hot enough for the purpose she intends to use it for on "free day Friday" in her Foods II Class.

Health and P.E.

What do you think is the most important lesson or area that is discussed in health classes and why?

Desiree Justus, sophomore: "I feel that when we talk about teen pregnancy in Health it is very important. Some people don't realize all the responsibilities about pregnancy and being a teen parent. Hopefully after the lesson, they will change their point of view."

Caleb Gates, sophomore: "The lesson on relationships is important. You need to learn to accept yourself and the others around you."

Mark Branch, sophomore: "One of the most important lessons that is discussed is drug awareness. As much as it is emphasized, it is still important to understand the consequences involved with drugs and alcohol."

Amanda Sweat, sophomore: "I think that AIDS is very important to learn about because it's a serious problem that we need to be more aware of."

Stacy Broyles, sophomore: "The total class is important for you to learn about your body, and it teaches you how to protect it."

Micah Gates, sophomore: "The lesson on skin is important, because skin itself is very important, it protects all the other parts of your body."

Jessica Howard, sophomore: "I think that the STD chapter is the most important. It explains the dangers of STD's, and why you should be responsible when it comes to sex. For some, it opens your eyes to reality."

What is your favorite activity in P.E. and why?

Jenny Dickey, sophomore: "Football because it is a boy's sport and it lets us prove that we can play it too."

Brooke Huntzinger, sophomore: "Tennis because it is my favorite sport."

Four-year cross country members seniors Brett Hamilton and Jeremy Shelton show off their Grant-4 trophies. These two seniors shared the glory of being on a winning team for their four years of high school.

During a key point in a varsity basketball contest, senior Beau Engle and junior Brock Ricks receive instruction from the bench.

Sports

Madison-Grant Argyll sports have a long tradition of success. This year was no exception. Madison-Grant athletics were well known in the county as well as in the state. The football, cross country, volleyball, girls and boys basketball, baseball, and softball, all had very good seasons. The boys tennis team also got its first win in 72 meets.

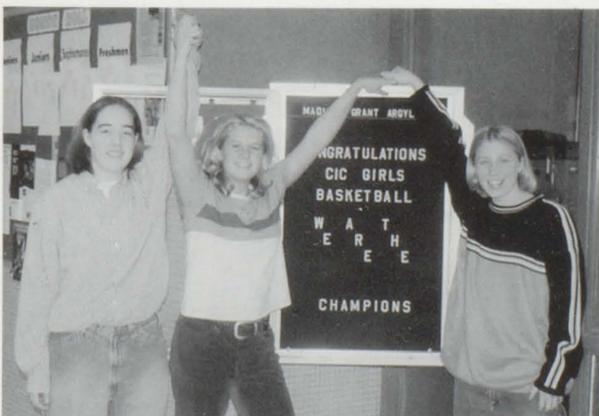

The Madison-Grant football team had another great regular season finishing 7-1, but the Argylls fell short in the sectional. Senior Eric Sites became the school's all time leading rusher and senior Max Miller signed a letter of intent to play for the Purdue Boilermakers.

The cross country team went for their fourth straight Grant Four title. Senior Brett Hamilton reached the cross country semi-state, which was farther in competition than anyone from Madison-Grant had ever gone in that sport. Brett also broke the school record for best time in a cross country meet.

Madison-Grant faired well this year in basketball also. Without the "famous Kyles" returning, many people wondered how the team would perform. The team managed to do well with the leadership of the new coach, Mr. Summers, and had another great season. Max Miller joined the 1000 point club. The Lady Argylls basketball team also had another winning season. They captured their second consecutive C.I.C. championship.

Athletics once again played an important role at Madison-Grant.

Sophomore cross country runner Desiree Justus used all her strength to finish strong and receive a good time for her run.

"We did it again!" Seniors Crissy Vctor, Brooke Justus, and Amanda Dunlap are proud to be members of the basketball team, especially after the girls' varsity basketball team won its second consecutive C.I.C. title.

"I like being a cheerleader because I get to be in front of a crowd and perform. I love that!" said senior Amy Record.

"The best part of cheerleading was the excitement of cheering in front of a large crowd," said sophomore Nicole Skinner.

Senior Britany Meyer soars into a grueling basket toss after her fellow varsity cheerleaders toss her high into the air. Meyer is one of the main flyers for the cheerleaders.

Freshman Courtney Campbell cheers on the varsity football team to a homecoming victory over Elwood. Campbell and the other M-G cheerleaders cheer at the pep session before the game.

Cheerleading

Football, basketball, tennis, baseball, track are all well known sports to high school students. There is no debate about it. But what about the lesser known sports? Cheerleading requires very dedicated, strong, determined girls in order to be successful. Unlike many other sports, it takes year round attention--summers included.

Many cheerleaders chose to cheer for different reasons. Some cheered to stay in shape, some had older siblings who cheered. "I love to do stunts and fly up into the air. It also gives me an opportunity to do some of my gymnastics," commented senior Britany Meyer.

Cheerleaders had the responsibility to get the crowd motivated during football and basketball season. "I like getting people fired up for the game. It's also very exciting to do new stunts during starting line ups," said junior Jennifer Wilson.

Cheerleading was a personal choice, and hard work was expected from the beginning of the year. The girls had to endure cold football weather, hot basketball gymnasiums, and many sore muscles and bruises from difficult stunts. Sophomore Casey Blanton said, "The only thing I think isn't real great about cheerleading is getting up at 6:30 a.m. two or three times a week for practice, but we have to do it to be good."

Even with all the tough times, the cheerleaders, overall, had a good year. They went to camp, competitions, and learned a lot, from dances and jumps to lessons of patience and strength. "There's just something about cheerleading that's not like anything else!" stated senior Lori Carey.

Cross Country

For seniors Brett Hamilton and Jeremy Shelton, winning the Grant Four meet was not unusual. Both Jeremy and Brett have participated in four years of cross country and have won the Grant Four every year.

"We were really excited for the race because we knew that we could win, but it was a matter of going and doing it!" explained senior Brett Hamilton, who placed second in the Grant Four. Brett also broke a school record of 16:42, set by Bill West back in 1981. Brett's time of 16:34 put his name down in the record books.

"I wanted the school record. That was a goal of mine," commented senior Brett Hamilton on his spectacular performance.

Senior Jeremy Shelton also reached a personal goal at the Grant Four. Jeremy ran a career best of 17:27.

Senior Brett Hamilton's success did not end with the Grant Four. Brett placed eighth at the sectional, which sent him on to the regional at Manchester, where he placed eleventh. Brett's number eleven spot was good enough to send him on to the semi-state at Manchester.

The Lady Argylls also had a hero, just like the boys team. Sophomore Nicole Skinner placed third in CIC competition at Wabash and in the Grant Four. The lady Argylls, as a team, placed fifth in the CIC.

Though the lady Argylls team was not successful, that didn't stop them from having an enjoyable season. The senior girls, above all, enjoyed their last season the most. "The family that we've made over the years, all of the songs we sang while we ran, and most of all, even though cross country was not one of my favorite sports, I ran for four years and completed a task that not many people have done. I did it!" explained senior Crissy Vetur.

"I will miss the friendly chats with the younger girls. I have probably never laughed so much while I was running like I did this year. Going to Mounds Park, Taylor and living for our theme, Run for the Bush, I will also miss about cross country," explained senior Brooke Justus.

Sophomore Nicole Skinner strides for a good time at the Oak Hill Invitational. Skinner proved to be an asset to the team and improved by about a minute from last season.

Senior Brett Hamilton nears the finish line at the regional. Hamilton's finish qualified him for the semi-state competition where he was the only runner representing Madison-grant.

"Even though winning was a big goal, I think becoming better tennis players was also a big goal," said sophomore Steven Ott.

Sophomore Ross Click gets ready to return a volley against Muncie Burris in late season play. Even though they did not pull out a team victory, they still put up a good fight.

Senior Ryan Williams serves in a singles match against Mississinewa. The Argylls varsity tennis team was unable to pull out another victory.

Sophomore Matt Stephenson returns a serve against Mississinewa in varsity tennis action. He was one of five sophomores that played on the varsity team.

Boys Tennis

The boys tennis team was able to do something against Frankton that they haven't done in five years--celebrate a victory. Knowing that there was a 71- game losing streak, it was very hard to keep their heads up.

"It was hard keeping our heads up but everyone knew we would win at least one meet. It was in our hearts," said sophomore Jeremy Pfeffer.

This was a team with lack of age and experience. It was a team with 10 sophomores, a foreign exchange student who had never played tennis before, and only one senior. Ryan Williams, the lone senior, showed excellent leadership.

"I had to prove to everybody that I was going to take charge and be the leader. When my teammates' heads were hanging, I had to encourage them," said senior Ryan Williams.

Tennis is a physical sport, but it is mostly mental.

"Tennis is more than two people hitting a ball over the net. It's hard just keeping your mental status," said sophomore Steven Ott.

Among some of the other changes was the new coach.

"He liked doing his job," said sophomore Steve Ott. "He is young so he knows some of the troubles we were having."

"He gave everybody a lot of good advice," said sophomore Jeremy Pfeffer. "He always seemed like no matter how bad or good we were playing, he was always having fun."

Volleyball

After losing nine seniors from last year's season, the 1997-98 members of the Lady Argyll volleyball team had many positions to fill. Seniors Amanda Dunlap, Laura Linn, and Kelly Hiatt were the only returning lettermen.

"Because I had not played since I was a freshman, I had a lot to prove. My goal was to prove I could be a strong player at the net," said senior Cara Hussey.

The main goal for the majority of the team was to keep the Grant Four title. However, the lady Argylls were knocked out of line the first round by Eastbrook Panthers.

Volleyball is not an individual sport. It takes teamwork to accomplish victories. "I enjoy the team aspect of volleyball, because everyone has to work to win," said junior Katie Runyan.

Sophomore Beth Barnes added, "Volleyball is a very competitive sport and without the team effort, you can't achieve anything."

The Lady Argylls had many different ways to get mentally prepared before the game. "I started preparing myself for the game as soon as I get my uniform on and start stretching. Getting out there on the court to warm-up really helps me to prepare mentally," said senior Cara Hussey.

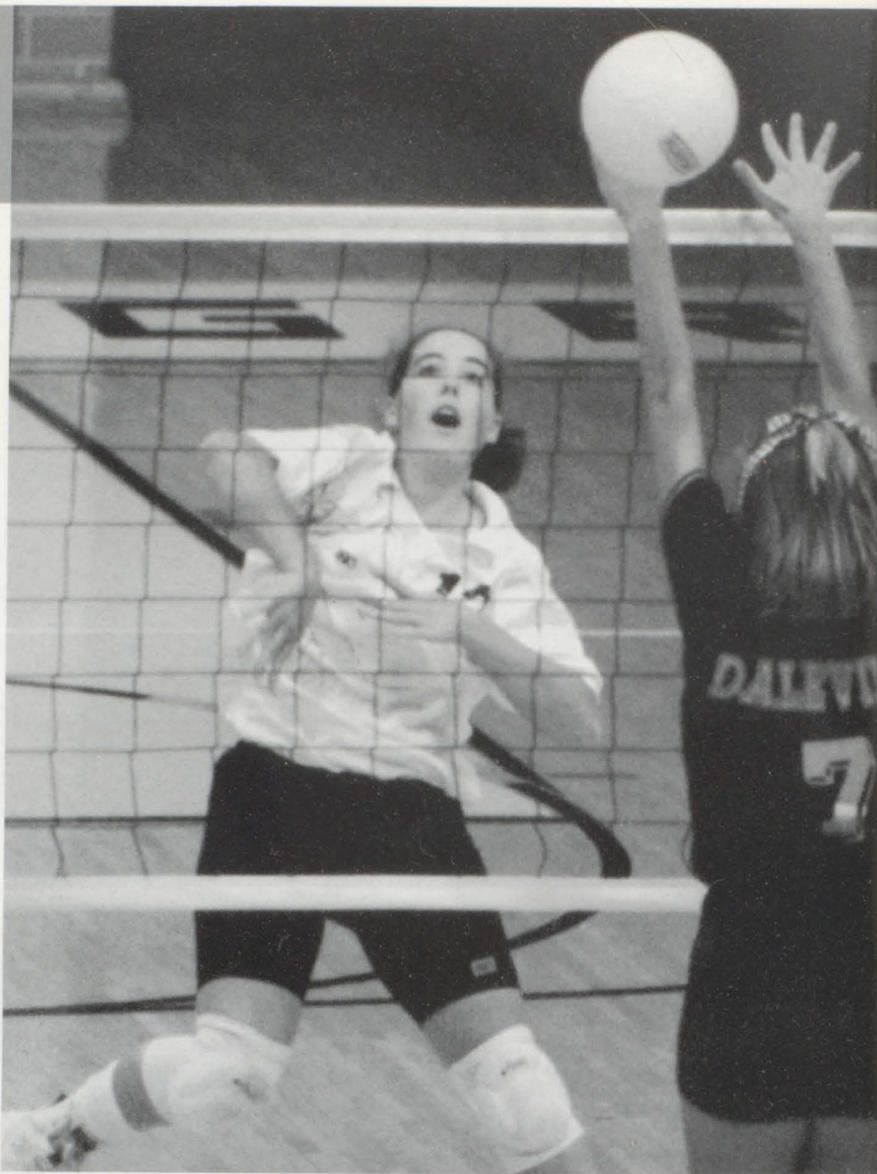

"Right after school on game days the team would go to one of the players' houses to eat, and then we'd always watch the Rosie O'Donnell Show," mentioned freshman Leigh Ann Hasty.

Senior Laura Linn added, "We had fun acting like cheerleaders in the locker room to get our blood flowing before the games. We also prayed and said a traditional cheer before we went out on the floor."

A loss with South Adams in the 2A sectional brought the Lady Argyll season to an end with an 11-17 record, and a 5-2 record for the C.I.C.

Football

Preparation began the day after last season's game against Wabash. Long, hard practices followed, along with many excruciating hours spent in the weight room. Finally, on August 22, at 7:30 pm., the Madison-Grant football team proved that hard work really does pay off, with an 18-14 win against South Adams.

That was only the first victory, with many more to follow. But with every upside, there is a downside. "I would've liked to have had a different outcome in the Tipton game," commented Coach Zgunda. The team would've liked to win also, but their first loss came with a score of 48-13.

After the first half of the season, some bad luck befell the Argyls. Senior Dallas Coleman had to sit out during four games because of a knee injury. Another senior, Rodney Webb, missed six games as a result of appendicitis, and senior Aaron Aschendorf missed half the season because of a broken ankle. "We lost a lot of good players, but the guys still playing played with a lot of heart and intensity," explained senior Aaron Eden.

A lot of reasons went into the fact that the football team was so successful. Many different things helped them along the way. "The fans really supported us. It's always good to have people in the community involved in what we're doing," said senior James Martin. "All the hours we spent in the weight room also helped."

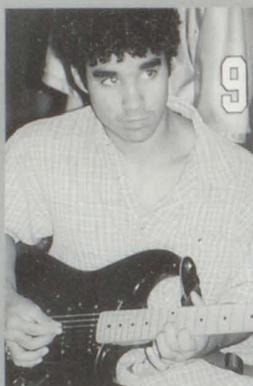

"The team has come a long way through hard work and dedication," said Coach Zgunda.

"To be a wrestler a person would have to be balanced, physically fit, intelligent, quick, have very good balance and coordination along with being very disciplined," explained senior Shaun Nelson.

"I decided to wrestle this year because I like the spandex. It makes me feel like a super hero. I just wish it came with a cape," stated sophomore Johnny Estrella.

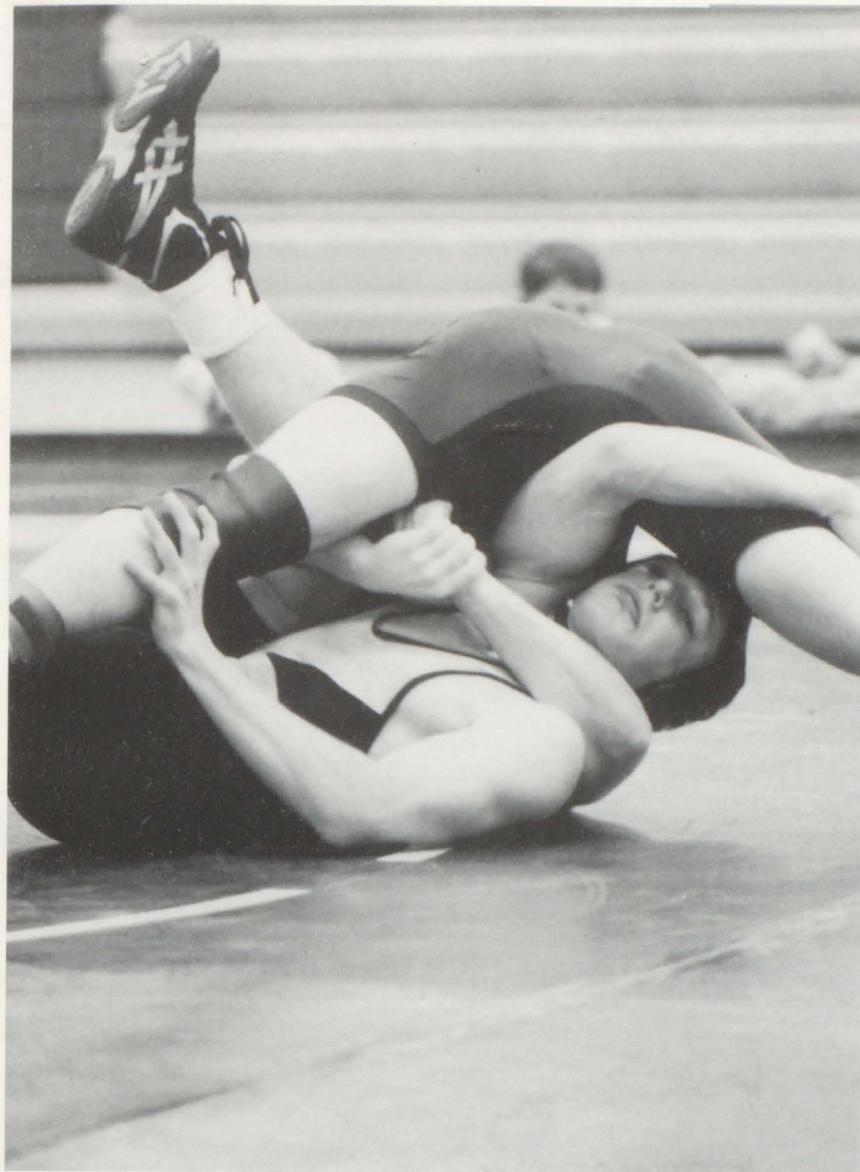

Sophomore wrestler Steve Ott, on the far left, stands alone as the only Madison-Grant wrestler to win sectionals. Steve stood proud along with the other sectional weight champs.

Struggling to get out of a pinfall, sophomore Curt Haisley thinks about what to do next. Thinking maneuvers through is a big part of the wrestling sport.

Wrestling

The M-G wrestling team entered the season not only with a lot of new goals and determination, but also with a new coaching staff. Under the coaching of Benny LaCount and assistant coach Josh Hull, the wrestlers learned many new moves and were supplied with a fresh new outlook for a long and successful season.

Explaining how the new coaching staff helped him, sophomore Steven Ott said, "I believe that coach LaCount and Assistant Coach Hull were the best coaches for me coming out for wrestling my first year. They helped me with winning, losing, and everyday pride in the way I practice. That's what I think a coaching staff should consist of."

A good coaching staff can help win a few meets, but without a solid and healthy team the season is not a success. With the injuries of Andy Stanley at the beginning of the season, Damon Stansberry at the C.I.C. and frequent absences of other wrestlers throughout the season, making the season a success was very difficult.

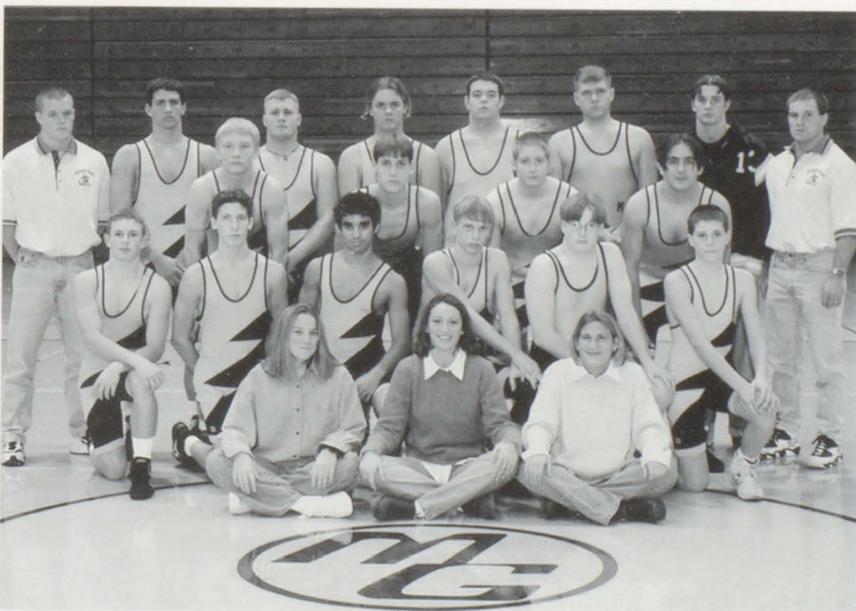

"I think we did all right. We were short on guys, but I think it helped us work harder to try to make up for the shortage of men," explained sophomore Steven Ott.

The shortage of men from injury was very instrumental in the outcome of the season. Wrestling is a high contact sport, which makes injury more applicable. "It was a real bummer that I got hurt, because I had high hopes for the sectional," remarked junior Damon Stansberry.

Wrestling is also a sport of extreme dedication and mental stability. To be a good wrestler one must put forth everything in his heart to be a truly successful wrestler. Sophomore Andy Stanley explained what he thinks it takes to be a successful wrestler. "Heart; there are so many things to learn in wrestling; and it takes a lot of heart to stick with it and drill every one thousand times over."

Since there were no home meets this season, the boys had to adjust to a new atmosphere every meet. "When you walk in the doors of another school and see the mats, your stomach starts turning and all you can think about is how you will do later on," explained sophomore Andy Stanley.

Basketball

The Lady Argyll basketball team put another season into the record books. For the second time in a row, the Lady Argylls won the C.I.C. championship.

The obstacle at the beginning of the season for the Lady Argylls was a lack in confidence about performing as well as they have in the past. But soon they defeated the fear as their hustle grew.

"We weren't as confident at the beginning of the season because of our lack of height. But we overcame our fear and beat teams with our speed," said senior Crissy Vetur. "Lots of hard work, determination, and running shorts helped us accomplish our second C.I.C. championship."

The Lady Argylls got the chance to play before the boys' varsity team twice this year. It was a new way for the Lady Argylls to experience playing on the weekend and in front of a larger crowd.

"Playing at home before the boys' game was an experience I will never forget. The whole atmosphere was just awesome," said senior Brooke Justus.

Even though the J.V. started the season off a little sluggish, they got it together to finish the season off strong.

"The first half of the season was rough, but eventually we started winning. Even though our record wasn't as good as last year's, it still meant a lot to everybody on the team," said J.V. player April Vickery.

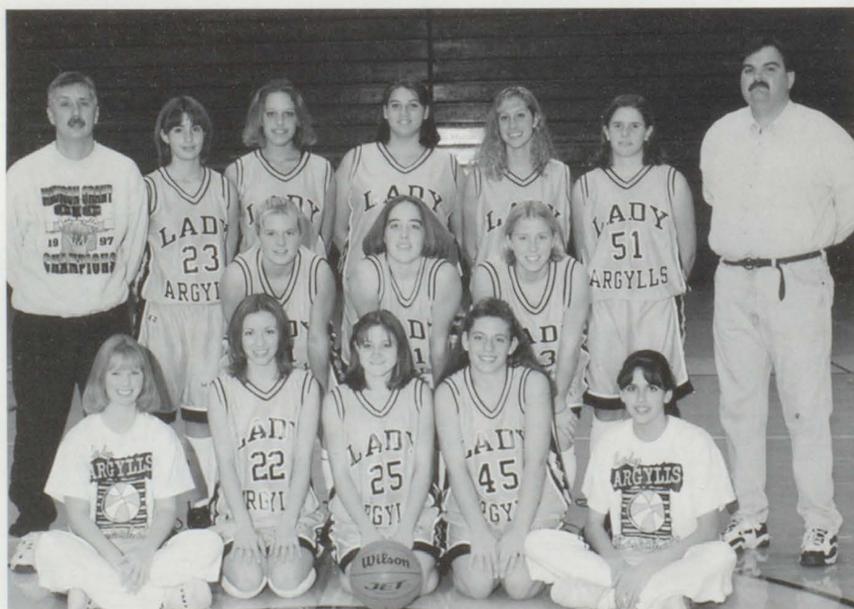

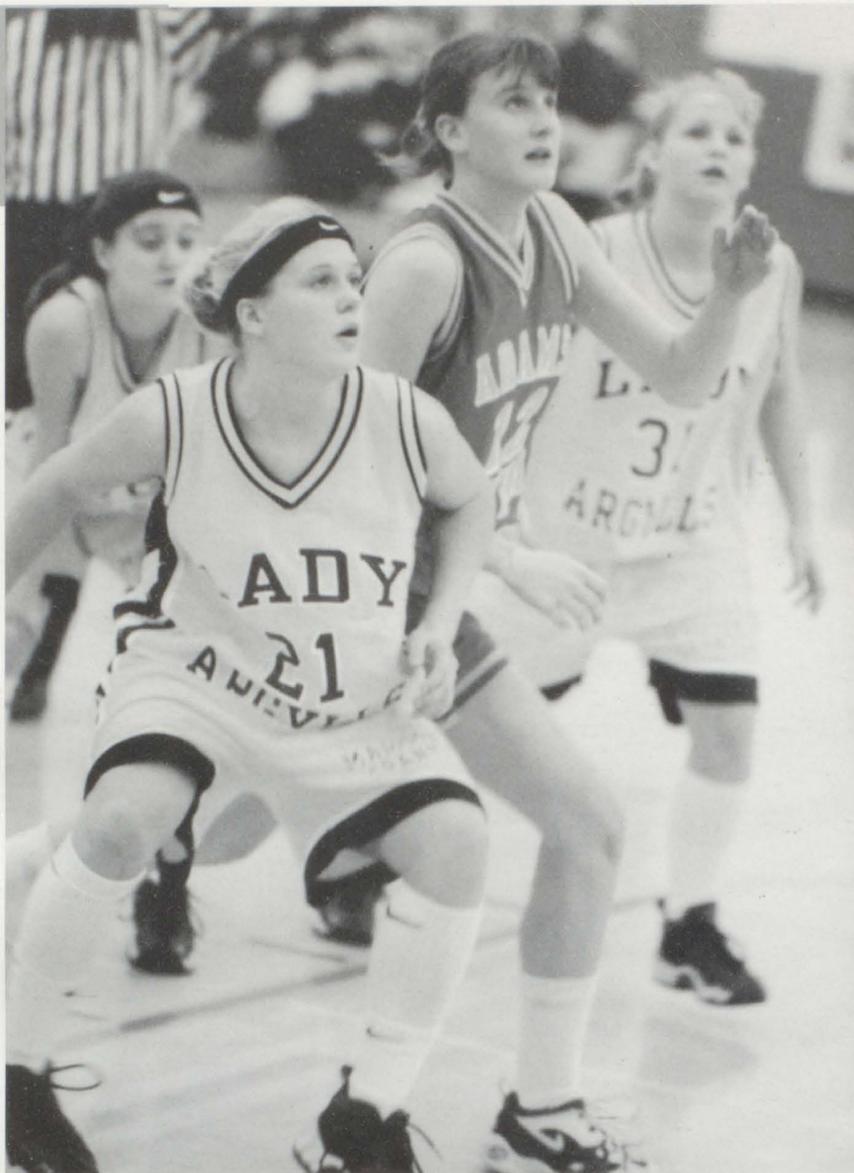

The Lady Argylls also had to face the new system of class basketball.

"I think sectional was tough," said senior Amanda Dunlap. "I don't know that I really like the class system."

The Lady Argylls ended their 12-9 season in the first round of the class 2A sectional to Adams Central. With their determination, the Lady Argylls learned any team can achieve their best with hustle and believing.

Fighting to get a clear shot senior Nick 'Stick' Roth is determined to out do the competition and score despite the Alexandria player's attempt to block him. The Argylls fell to the class 2A state champions, the Alexandria Tigers.

Junior Jason Hiatt uses his fastest moves to drive around the South Adams defender in the first game of the sectional. After defeating South Adams, the boys varsity moved on to be beaten by Bluffton in the second game of the sectional.

Basketball

For the first time in five years the Argylls were without a Kyle on the varsity team. With three starters gone from last year's team the Argylls and new coach Jeff Summers, who replaced long time coach Terry Martin after his retirement, had a little rebuilding to do this year. With good leadership and scoring the Argylls had a very successful season.

The Argylls had a balanced attack this season using their inside and outside game. Max Miller led the team in scoring and he also joined the 1000 point club, Max also became the school's all time rebounder. With Max on the inside and the outside shooting of Beau Engle, Brett Hamilton, and Jeremy Shelton the Argylls put up some big numbers. Senior Dallas Coleman missed most of the season with a bad knee, but when he played he proved to be very effective.

"The last two years have been really fun and exciting for the team. Madison-Grant was all of the sudden 'the mad to beat' in Grant county," commented coach Summers.

The team had its share of critics. Most people thought that the Argylls were going to be a sub par team, but the Argylls stuck together and proved them wrong with big wins over teams like Oak Hill, Eastern, and Kokomo Taylor. The Argylls also gave a valiant effort to the state champion Alexandria Tigers, but fell just short in the end.

The Argylls received a very good draw going into the first ever class basketball tournament. The Argylls drew the South Adams Starfires. The sectional was played at the Stardome, a very nice facility and home of the Starfires. But the home court advantage would not help them as the Argylls played a complete game and prevailed 43-40. They were then beaten by The Bluffton Tigers.

Basketball

It was a great year for the junior varsity squad. They won their Grant Four tournament by beating Eastbrook and Oak Hill.

"We played very well during the tournament," said freshman Brock Meyer.

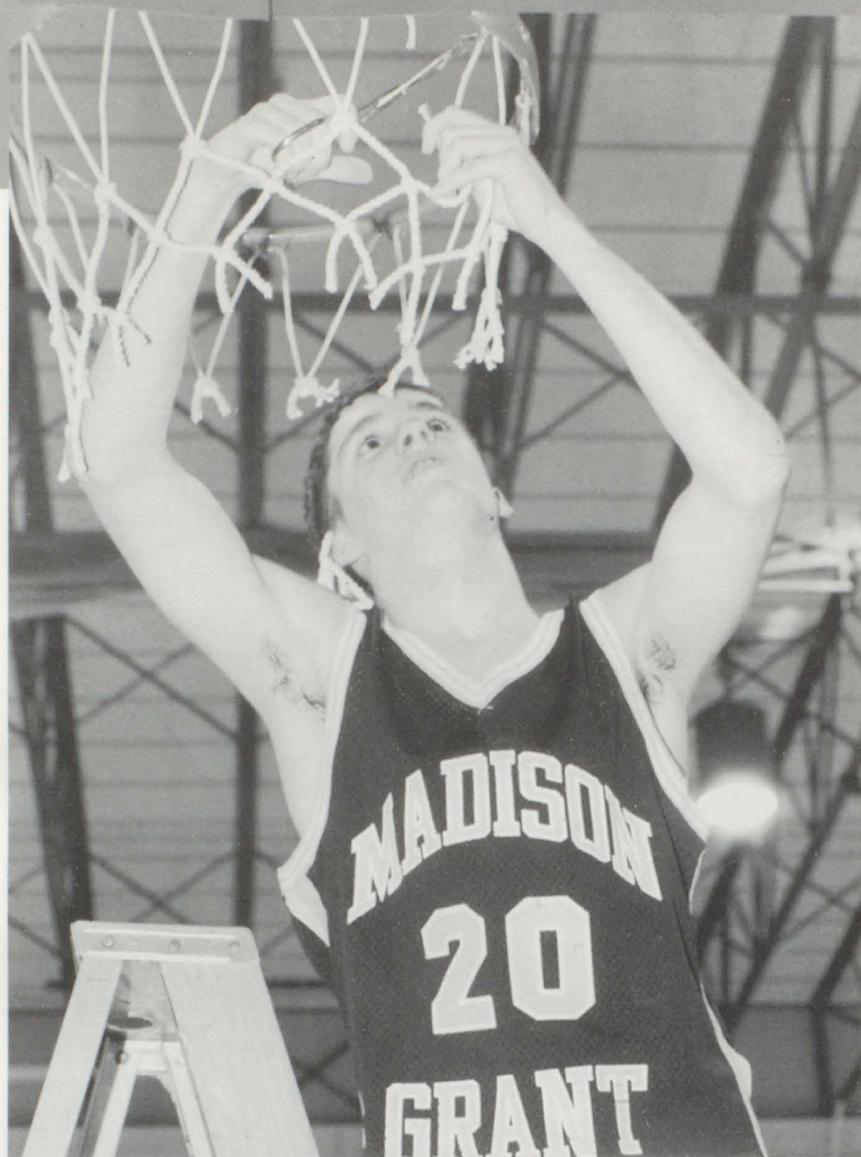

"It is the only tournament we get to play, so it was important for us to get some hardware," said junior varsity coach Stan Davis.

The freshmen basketball team went an even 8-8 this year. With a team that has not had much success in the past, this was a welcome improvement.

"This team achieved a lot this year. They learned different things that will help them prepare for the j.v. and varsity season next year," said coach Dave Strasemeier. "This team hasn't had a lot of success in the past and I'm sure they learned things that will help them to win more.

"Every team is different. I'm sure this age group will have some success in the future," coach Strasemeier added.

Senior Ryan Williams, the team's only senior, became the Argylls' number one golfer.

"We needed to focus more this year to be successful," said Coach Bach.

Freshman golfer Eric Avery uses all his force to hit the ball as far as he possibly can.

Golf

Although golf is usually not thought to be a very difficult sport, it could possibly be one of the most difficult and demanding sports one can play.

Hoping to improve individual and team skills, the golf team never stopped practicing. In fact their practices took place two and a half hours a day five times a week at the Hart Golf course in Marion.

"I think the most beneficial thing about practices is that they allowed me to correct my game as well as to learn new things," said senior Ryan Williams.

"During practices we usually worked on our individual shots, and then as a team, tried to put it all together," said sophomore Lee Ross.

The outcome of their hours put into practicing did not measure up to what they expected. The team got off to a pretty rocky start, which left them much room for improvement.

"Along with our putting skills, we really needed to work on controlling our temper a little better," said sophomore Matt Mason.

Attitude is a big key in any sport, but this "skill" was probably what the golf members needed to improve on the most.

"Our team needed to improve their mental game. It was just something we didn't have," said senior Ryan Williams.

The golf team worked hard to overcome many obstacles, and ended up learning new skills, being a team, and having an overall good time.

Track

Stretching, running, throwing, and jumping, these are the things an athlete has to perfect to be a successful track and field participant.

This year wasn't quite as successful as the track team would have liked, but many athletes were successful in their respective events.

One of those was junior Jeremy Freel who broke the discus record at Oak Hill relays this year.

"It felt great to throw that far. The 159-foot toss really helped me build confidence for the rest of the year," said Jeremy.

The track team didn't have many seniors so the underclassmen had to really help out.

"Being one of the many juniors this year I knew I really had to step it up this year to throw my best in the shot-put," said Junior Damon Stansberry.

The team did not have as many high finishes as before, but with all of the underclassmen they could prove to be a real power in track in the future.

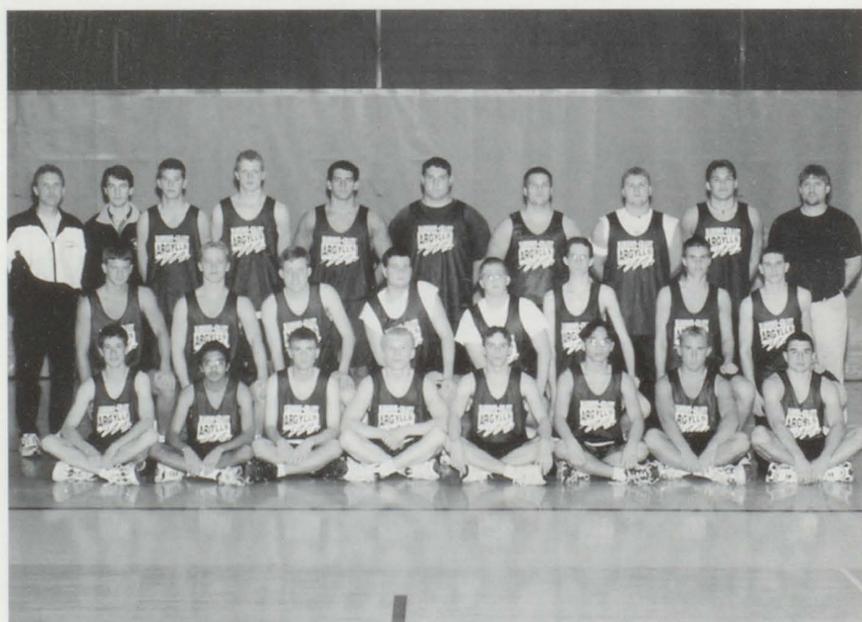

After losing four competitive seniors and only one returning senior, the girls track team had many events to be filled.

"This track season was a lot different from last year. We got a late start due to not having a coach which was a disadvantage to us, because other teams already had two or three weeks of practice. Another thing is we didn't have as many girls as last year, so we had a lot of girls running three to four events, which is tough. But overall we did alright, with having to adjust to the changes," commented sophomore Desiree Justus.

The returning champs of Grant Four placed third and looked to improve in the tough C.I.C. at IWU and the Sectional at Northwestern.

Senior Brett Hamilton raced towards the finish line, in the relay race, as his teammates and opponents watched him intently.

Baseball

Beginning in late February the boy's baseball team started to work hard in practice, working on many things. With a wet and cold spring, practice was limited to indoors for most of March. Even with the bad weather, they still managed to do many helpful things. They did drills--everything from running bases, to working on pitching, and even hitting practice.

Many of the things they did in practice paid off throughout the year.

"Definitely infield/outfield practice helped everyone the most," commented sophomore Caleb Gates. "If we cut down on our errors, we could win more games," he added.

With the new class sports system, the class 2A M-G baseball team played many ranked teams. Ranging from class 2A number two ranked Alexandria to class 3A number ninth ranked Delta, they really had to work hard every game. At the Delphi Classic, they went into the tournament the only unranked team and came out a respectable third place.

"We had a very tough schedule. We played a lot of ranked teams. Because of this, we really improved throughout the year," said senior captain Josh Tobey.

When senior Josh Tobey went out with a pulled muscle in the Wabash game, it proved to be costly through the year, even though he didn't miss any games.

"When Josh pulled the muscle in his leg, he came right back and played," said senior Eric Sites.

Even though some parts of the year were tough, and everyone worked hard for three and a half months, everyone still had fun.

"This year was really fun. Everyone worked hard and it showed throughout the year," added junior first baseman Mark Earnest.

This proved to be another good year for baseball. With six seniors graduating, next year could be a challenge for the Argylls.

Softball

The winning Lady Argyll softball team will be losing five seniors next year. This will basically clear the softball field for the MG team. Leaving will be senior Brooke Justus, who is behind the plate, senior first baseman Amanda Dunlap, and senior Crissy Vetur who played short stop for the Lady Argylls. Others leaving are senior Laura Linn, in right field and in left, senior Megan Diskey.

"I think this season is very important to all of us, because we have all played together since we were nine," said senior Megan Diskey.

The Lady Argyll team did start off the season with a bang! Junior Lindsey Walker pitched a season opener, no-hitter to Northwestern, where Walker lead the team to a 6-0 victory.

"I think the no-hitter by Lindsey pumped the team up for the rest of the season," said junior Katie Runyan.

Senior Crissy Vetur added, "I was a little skeptical before we began playing, but since Lindsey threw that no-hitter ballgame, I became more confident."

The MGLady Argylls were ranked number two in class 2A, but fell to number six after losses to Eastern, Peru, and Blackford.

"The team did have some bad games but I believe we could have won if we would have just stayed focused," said sophomore Jessica Howard.

"My freshman year, we were in the sectional finals and lost. My sophomore year we won sectional but lost first round in regional. We won sectional, regional, and lost our first game in semi-state my junior year. So it is our time," said senior Crissy Vetur.

At the end of the regular season the Lady Argylls looked hopefully into the start of the sectional.

After painstakingly running toward the ball, freshman Jill Dykhoff smashes the ball back to her opponent with a mean forehand.

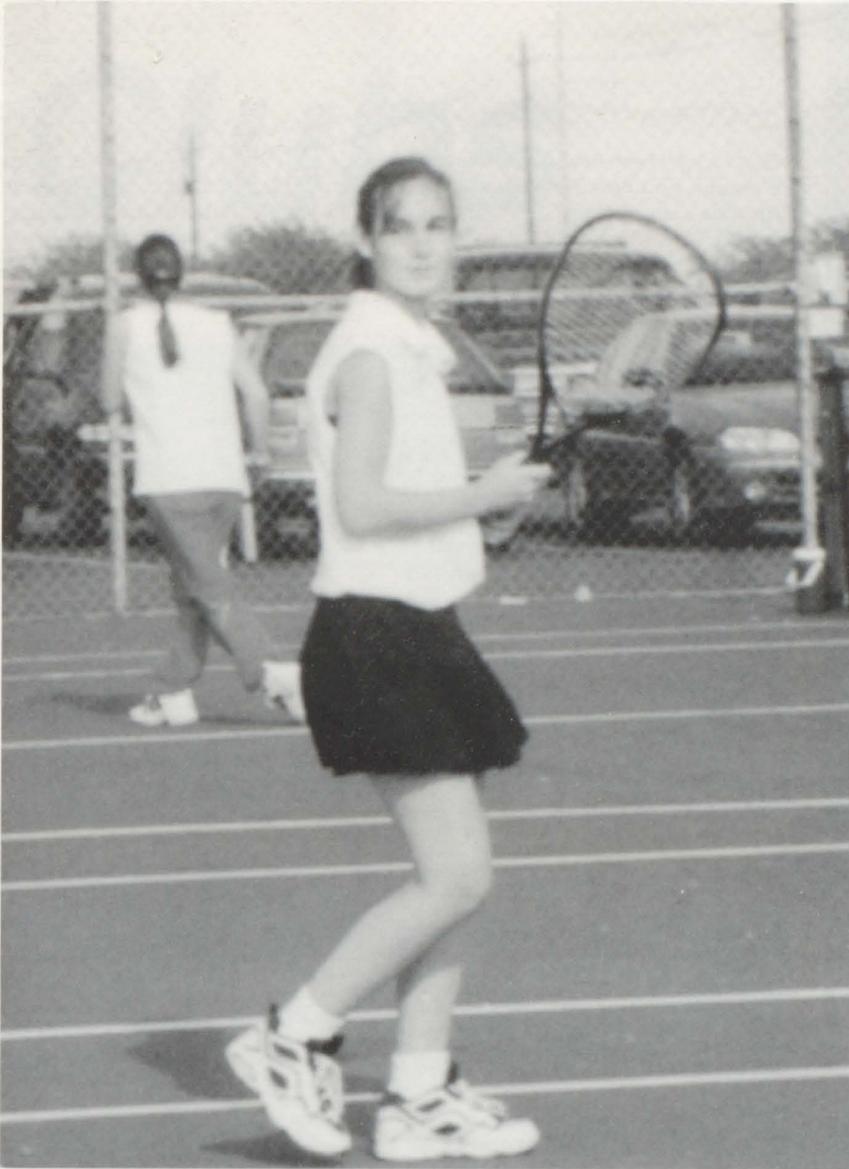

"I like tennis because it is a team sport as well as an individual one. You try your hardest and also cheer on all your other teammates," stated senior Abby Matchette.

"It felt pretty awesome to sweep Blackford and Lapel, and it felt good celebrating together," stated senior Tracie Ott.

Tennis

The level of experience for the girl's tennis team has helped give the team two shutouts early in the season. But that has not happened with the rest of the season. Seniors filled all the spots on varsity except for the number one doubles slot. The shutouts over Lapel and Blackford helped the tennis team sail into the last half of the season.

In the opener of the season, the tennis team won over Lapel with a shutout. The doubles matches ended in two sets, but all the singles matches went into three sets. "It felt pretty awesome to sweep Blackford and Lapel; it felt good celebrating together," commented senior Tracie Ott, the number one singles player. The win was accomplished with hardwork, determination, and teamwork.

The next three matches were losses, including a close two to three loss under Frankton. But the girls bounced back with a shutout over rival Blackford.

Winning is not everything. Some athletes just like to have fun. "I'm probably the worst player on the team, but it is a lot of fun," said senior exchange student Dorothea Mueller.

Practices were during nights that the team had no matches. Practices consisted of players practicing in game-like situations against one another.

The fans do not wait in line to watch the girls, but the girls don't care. On the other hand, some support money could be helpful. "I think we should have uniforms like the baseball and softball teams," explained junior Jennifer Herniak. All equipment comes out of the pockets of the players, except for the tennis balls.

The girls stick together through thick and thin. Rain could not stop these girls from playing a sport they absolutely love. Even though this is an individual sport at times, it takes a team to pull out a win.

National Honor Society and Academic Team

Scholarship, service, leadership, and character are all qualities that an "Academic Argyll" must possess in order to be a member of the National Honor Society. Becoming a member of the NHS is a great honor and privilege. Students are selected by a committee of faculty and administration who judge them not only according to their academic standings, but also according to their whole-person qualities.

The National Honor Society is an honorary society for students in grades 10 through 12, founded in 1921 by the National Association of Secondary Principals, which directed it. The society has established a tradition of recognizing students who have a desire to excel and who are willing to make their ideals of the NHS the ideals of the school.

An elite group of eleven juniors and seniors got the candle passed to them in the footsteps of the original six NHS members (seniors Lori Carey, Josh Tobey, Brooke Justus, Laura Linn, Ryan Williams, and Janine Lashure) and their proud sponsors Mrs. Herring and Mrs. Haviland. In order to become a member of the NHS a student must hold and maintain at least a 3.5 grade point average and possess all four qualities.

In front of the student body (excluding freshmen), staff, parents, sponsors, and school board members, the NHS president, senior Laura Linn, inducted the new members. The Academic Team was also introduced and rewarded for their excellence by Coach Kirby. This was the first time that the NHS ceremony was public.

"I thought the ceremony was a lot nicer than in the past. Now everyone in the school and community has seen what the NHS is all about," commented NHS member, senior Lori Carey.

The highlight of the ceremony was the attention grabbing speech by special guest Dr. Albert J. Shannon, president of St. Joseph's college. Dr. Shannon emphasized excellence in his speech. He frequently stressed that, "Whatever you do, do it with excellence." Dr. Shannon had a special way of touching everyone in the room with subjects and ideas that everyone could understand. He also explained what a wonderful idea that he thought the ceremony was. "I wish we could do this every month to recognize students academically," he said.

After the ceremony the new members, old members, parents, speakers, and sponsors retired to the home economics room for food, celebrating, and visiting at a reception. After the reception was over the students returned to class, to continue excelling in academics, the key that got them where they are now: The National Honor Society.

From Lands Afar

From lands afar
I search for confusion
My mind's ajar
I come to one conclusion
Life's wrong twisted terms
With mangled lines of reality
Come with the conquests of concerns
With lines of confidentiality

Wretched ruins of remains
Complex fluids to run full of sensuality
I shimmer with the glimmer rains
And wait for the twisted terms of reality

Watching eyes hear my sweet ear candy
Money minding fools wreck into insanity
Calamity wars inside my head
Will make me explode into profanity
Watch me world
Watch my back
Don't let their memories
Fade to black
